WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of the poor or minority groups are conspicuously absent from state planning agencies created under the $40 million Safe Streets Act, an independent study maintains.

So are private businesses, nonprofit organizations and officials of welfare, health and manpower agencies whose concerns relate closely to crime, said the study released Monday by the Urban Coalition and Urban America Inc.

Professionals in Charge
"These interests must be included in the plans to serve the needs of the society at large," said the study, entitled "Law and Disorder," which was based on a survey of planning in 12 of the 50 states participating under the year-old act.

Violence Not Likely to End, Historian Feels

Bloody-Mindedness Prevails Through Action, Reaction

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — A historian who codirected a federal study of violence in America believes that "continued violence is something we can look for—like it or not."

"We are a pluralistic society with group frictions. We are also an affluent and liberal society with a helluva lot of turmoil for a long time," said Dr. Hugh Davis Graham, a Johns Hopkins University history professor.

Graham was codirector with Dr. Ted Robert Gurr of Princeton University of the report issued in early June by the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence.

Reason for Friction
The report concluded that Americans "are a bloody minded people both in action and reaction."

"It would be astonishing to me if American society were any different," Graham, 32, said in an interview with the Baltimore Evening Sun.

The historian said there is "a lot of input for friction" in American society because of economic and social mobility, competition among racial groups and "the vigilante tradition" left from frontier days.

He believes the tradition of violence also has been reinforced by an acceptance in the past of violent actions taken by units of government against groups such as labor unions and racial minorities.

Live With Violence
Graham said he takes some reassurance from the fact that the nation has been able to live with violence for such a long time.

Although the United States ranked 24th out of 114 countries surveyed in the rate of civil strife, it has a low disorder death rate and a stable government.

"On the other hand, black and student violence is so unprecedented, there is no way to guess what will happen," Graham said.

"When the black pressure cooker boils, it triggers a white pressure cooker."

Nixons to Attend Agnew Wedding

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Pat Nixon says she and the President have decided they can make it to the wedding of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's daughter after all.

Pamela Agnew, 25, is marrying Robert De Haven, 25, of White Marsh, Md., in Towson, Md., Saturday. Initially the Nixons sent regrets because they planned to be in Key Biscayne, Fla., observing their 29th wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Nixon said Monday the President now finds himself too busy to go to Florida for the weekend and they will spend their anniversary instead at Camp David in western Maryland, so they will be able to attend the wedding.

Cooler

Fox Cities — Partly cloudy and cooler tonight and Wednesday. Low tonight near 47, high Wednesday near 67. Wind light and variable tonight and Wednesday. Precipitation probability 20 per cent tonight and Wednesday.

Return to Price Controls Advised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man who called the shots when price ceilings were last clamped on the nation thinks it is time for the government to try controls again—but voluntary, this time.

Michael V. DiSalle, Korean War price boss, suggested Nixon administration might try for hold-the-line agreements with the 500 biggest corporations, or with major industries. That would mean abandonment of the administration's policy stand against price-wage controls or guidelines, DiSalle said in an interview, but he added:

"The administration doesn't have many options left now."

Inflation Accelerating
"If they keep putting it off, this inflation is just going to keep on accelerating."

DiSalle, former Democratic governor of Ohio and mayor of Toledo, directed the Office of Price Stabilization from 1950 to 1952 and in the latter year administered wage curbs also, a director of economic stabilization.

"I didn't think the 10 per cent surtax would do anything to slow things down, and it hasn't," said DiSalle, now practicing law in Washington.

"I do think some kind of quasi-voluntary system might work."

Economy Expanding
The economy was still expanding on the strength of consumer demand pent up during World War II. Price ceilings had been removed—probably prematurely, in DiSalle's opinion—and businessmen, fully expecting that ceilings would be restored, were marking up price tags to be in an advantageous position when the anticipated "freeze" came.

Prices climbed 8 per cent in the six-month period of military escalation preceding the clampdown in January 1951, even though some indirect controls were still in effect.

"Credit restraints were in use, rent controls still prevailed, and the excess profits tax was still in force," DiSalle said. "Yet none of these seemed to slow up the spiral."

Similar Situation
The situation is similar now, the lawyer said, with the surtax having no more dampening effect than the old excess profits tax, and with businesses borrowing hand over fist in spite of the record high interest rates.

Tightening the money screws brings inequitable effects, with hardships on small firms, on marginal businesses that need loans to expand, and on housing, DiSalle said.

As an alternative approach, he said, the government might seek voluntary support of, say, the 500 leading companies regardless of industry, whose pricing policies have substantial influence on the markets.

DiSalle recalled that in the period of OPS ceilings, some smaller companies asked and then found they couldn't make the markups stick. Customers turned to the bigger companies which were observing the ceilings.

And a wrench violent enough to cause a rapid deflation but then found they couldn't make the markups stick. Customers turned to the bigger companies which were observing the ceilings.

DiSalle said.

Both Parties Vow Support of Surtax

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan said today President Nixon has received firm assurances of both Democratic and Republican chiefs in the House—and he believes in the Senate—that they will go all out to get an extension of the income surtax.

Ford, with Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, backing him up, said at the White House that it would be catastrophic at home and abroad if the tax bill were not approved. And, he said that Nixon feels there should be no compromise on a three-prong measure to extend the 10 per cent surtax for six months to January 1 and 5 per cent for the next six months, phase out a 7 per cent investment credit, and remove millions of poor people from the income tax rolls.

But there are indications that some Democrats in the House Ways and Means Committee are balking at a surtax extension beyond six months.

House Approval
Asked whether Nixon was assured that he could get his tax program through, Ford didn't go quite that far. He said if the House committee approves the bill it will go through the House itself. And he said in that event the House could act on the bill in time to get it to the Senate for action before June 30.

The tax issue was uppermost at a weekly meeting of the President and Republican leaders of the House and Senate which ran on nearly two hours.

Dirksen said there was some discussion also of a supplementary appropriation bill before the Senate and some speculation that an amendment might be offered to withhold funds from the controversial antiballistic missile system.

Peace Corps
Dirksen said there also is a possibility of an amendment to increase the spending authorization for the Peace Corps by $55 million.

tax, and with businesses borrowing hand over fist in spite of the record high interest rates.

The idea of industry-wide hold-the-line agreements was tried briefly in the Korean War. A steel pact was made which worked, DiSalle recalled, but the idea fell apart when it proved impossible to bring the auto industry into agreement. It might work this time, DiSalle suggested.

As an alternative approach, he said, the government might seek voluntary support of, say, the 500 leading companies regardless of industry, whose pricing policies have substantial influence on the markets.

Party Congress

Communists Adjourn With Call to Fight Imperialism

MOSCOW (AP) — The international Communist conference held in the Kremlin since June 5 ended today with official acceptance of a call for Communist unity against imperialism.

An announcement did not disclose how many of the 75 parties attending the meeting had signed a 42-page final document.

It said the parties of Australia, Italy, San Marino and the French Island Reunion had expressed full support for only that section of the document dealing with the struggle against imperialism. They withheld support for other sections analyzing the problems of communism and the world.

It also said the party of the Dominican Republic, which complained during the conference that the document was not revolutionary enough, had declined to sign.

The final conference communiqué also announced that a 13-party commission to prepare for a world anti-imperialist congress had been set up and invited all parties, including those that did not attend the present conference, to take part.

Servicemen

To be Moved To Islands

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 16,000 soldiers and Marines being withdrawn from Vietnam will be redeployed to Okinawa, Hawaii and Japan, the Pentagon announced today.

Another 8,000 soldiers, including 2,000 mobilized National Guardsmen and reservists, will be returned to the United States to be disbanded and 1,200 Navy men will be distributed throughout the Pacific Command and the United States.

The Pentagon said the 8,000-man 9th Marine Regimental Landing Team will move to Okinawa, the 7,400-man 1st Brigade of the 9th Infantry Division and the division headquarters will go to Hawaii, and a Marine fighter squadron of about 400 men will be sent to Iwakuni, Japan, in July and August.

The new announcement completed details of the 25,000-man troop withdrawal announced by President Nixon at Midway 10 days ago.

When and where this congress might be held was not disclosed.

The official conference spokesman was repeatedly asked how many parties had signed the main document and each time he refused to give a figure.

He said two observer delegations from Cuba and Sweden did not sign and that the parties of Great Britain and Norway had declined to sign until they have a chance to discuss the matter with their parties back home.

With Reservations
He did not clarify whether the expression of support for part of the document by the Italian, Australian and other parties constituted a signing of the document or not.

He also indicated that some additional parties signed with reservations by saying the announcement did not exclude this.

Earlier unofficial Communist sources had reported that eight parties signed with various reservations.

But the majority of delegations signed the document fully and acclaimed the conference a success, they said. The Soviet Communist Party had tried for five years to convene the conference, and the original idea was to bring the Red Chinese into line or read them out of the Communist movement.

Resistance to such drastic plans prevented any quick results from the first call for a meeting in 1964. Only after the Soviet Union dropped China from the agenda and came up with a relatively mild, catch-all document could it find wide agreement for a conference.

China refused to attend. North Korea, North Vietnam, Japan, Holland, Albania and Yugoslavia also stayed away.

Air Protects Drivers

DETROIT (AP) — A Detroit firm has developed a new auto safety device, an air bag that inflates almost instantaneously when vehicle is in a front-end collision.

The inflated bag presses the riders into their seats, preventing them from being thrown against the dashboard or other portion of the car interior.

The first generation device is intended only to protect passengers during head-on collisions, but the developer says more sophisticated devices could be built to protect passengers in cars hit from the side or rear.

The developer said the device works this way:

Bags on the dashboard are released by a sensor placed on the passenger side of the firewall between the engine and the passenger compartment.

The sensor reacts to the quick deceleration of a crash by flying forward—the same way a rider does—connecting an electric circuit which releases compressed nitrogen gas and inflates bags in about one-fiftieth of a second.

Each bag has two four-inch holes, allowing the bag to deflate moments after it is inflated so passengers will not be pinned in the car.

Greek Princess Makes 1st Concert Appearance

She won a three-minute ovation Monday night playing Concerto No. 2 with her tutor Greek pianist Gina Bauchaner.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sena-William A. About 6,000 persons were arrested, he said, and there were 645 suspensions and expulsions. Clay said 39 of the institutions granted student demands.

It was also reported at the Senate hearing that the American Insurance Association has flaming many other students.

Clay said a pamphlet on making bombs also was passed out to society members during a national SDS council meeting at the University of Colorado last October.

Young Hobby Club Six Different Cloth Patterns Combine to Form Fabric Fish

BY CAPPY DICK
The fish in a fabric fish display will be made of cloth and the more varied the cloth patterns are the more spectacular the fish will be. Figure 2 shows what the completed exhibit can look like.
Start with a piece of light blue construction paper and draw the outlines of six fish as in figure 1. Cut the fish out.
Cut a piece of cardboard the same size as the construction paper and to it glue six pieces of cloth of different patterns. You might use one plaid piece, a polka dot piece, a piece that is striped, a fourth that is flowered, a fifth that has an abstract design and a sixth that is corduroy.

Glue the pieces in such positions that they will show through the cutouts when the blue construction paper is placed on top.

Use mending tape to fasten the construction paper to the cardboard. When this has been done you will have a display of six fish made of six different fabrics. Place it on the wall of your own room.

Student Council At KHS Continues Dress Code Study

KAUKAUNA — Members of the Board of Education have been informed that student council members at Kaukauna High School will be meeting periodically this summer to discuss a student dress and conduct code which will be proposed later for board approval.

Students undertook such a project early this year, but initial proposals were not specific enough and the administrative council of the school, working in cooperation with the student council, suggested some changes in the code.

Board of education members agreed and the problem was returned to the student group. Wording of the initial dress code was too broad and ambiguous to meet the desires of the administrative council and school board.

Miss Wisconsin Hopefuls Smilin' Pretty

Annual Pageant Begins

Wearing a Pensive Smile, Mary Louise Chopin, Miss Appleton, relaxes briefly at poolside during Monday's meeting with the press at the Pioneer Motel & Marina.

Smiling isn't always easy, especially when it's a fulltime job.

But for 40 young women of our state, it will be difficult to look solemn this week in Oshkosh, where they have converged for the annual Miss Wisconsin Pageant. The excitement, the anticipation, the electric atmosphere — so unique to beauty pageants — has in just one short day worked its magic to make smiling happily a natural way of life.

That special day to be remembered by all of the candidates was Sunday, when they met each other for the first time at Donner Hall on the Oshkosh State University campus. Then it was on to a press conference, followed by a review of pageant rules and regulations.

Late afternoon brought a cookout and boat ride for contestants and chaperones before they adjourned to the Civic Auditorium for general rehearsals.

Up bright and early Monday morning, the Miss Wisconsin hopefuls again met the press to pose in swimsuits at the Pioneer Motel swimming pool. General rehearsals once more occupied their time until evening when the young women met the public and then assembled for the Miss Wisconsin Pageant Parade.

The first of three preliminary pageants is scheduled for 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Oshkosh Civic Auditorium. At 7:30 p.m. Saturday, the 1969 Miss Wisconsin Pageant will begin.

Indulging in a little friendly pool splashing are Merrilee Andersen, Miss WSU-Whitewater; Cindie Morgan, Miss Janesville; Susan Eby, Miss Beloit; Jacqueline Schulz, Miss Lake Geneva, and Karen Fitzgerald, Miss Racine.

Posing for a Group Portrait to be treasured by its subjects in the years to come are the 40 young women who are currently competing for the title of Miss Wisconsin 1969. (Post-Crescent Photos)

Two Fox Valley Area Candidates, Linda Graff, Miss Oshkosh, and Sue Sawyer, Miss Fond du Lac, pose together Monday for photographers at the Pioneer Motel pool.

Prof. Cloak: '40 Glorious Years'

BY JAMES AUBREY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

It was Prof. F. Theodore Cloak's greatest performance. Yet the master director, who steps down this spring after heading the Lawrence University theatre department for four decades, had but a single line to deliver.

And before he was given an opportunity to do even that, Prof. Cloak found himself in the unfamiliar position of being "upstaged" by a procession of admirers — present and former students, colleagues and co-workers — who recounted, with gratitude and undisguised affection, some aspect of his "40 glorious years" at Lawrence, and testified to the impact of his teaching and example on their lives.

Former University actor P.

K. Allen, now of Connecticut, perhaps expressed the sentiment of those present most poignantly when he told the visibly moved director, "Thank you for sharing so much of your life with us."

Allen's words were echoed, verbally or silently, by some 120 friends who had gathered early Saturday evening at Riverview Country Club for a surprise tribute to the man who has, for so many years, symbolized theater at Lawrence.

By the time the guest of honor — shaken, but obviously pleased by the spirit of the occasion — finally rose to speak, he had little more to say than, "Thank you for this token of what you say I've done for you."

It was enough.

In his hand Prof. Cloak held an envelope containing two round-trip air fares to Scotland, and the Edinburgh drama festival. On the table before him were several bound volumes, containing letters addressed to him by all of his friends at the dinner, and by dozens more who had been unable, for one reason or another, to make the trip.

And, appropriately enough, there was a third gift: a "Man-sized box of Kleenex to cry into." And that was needed too.

Cloak, who joined the Lawrence faculty just 40 years ago this spring, had no inkling when he left home with his wife, Evelyn, that he was to attend a dinner in his honor. He understood simply that he was to dine at Riverview with some of his students.

But, once the true intent of the gathering had dawned on him, he responded with typical Cloak energy, and delightedly greeted his friends and former students, many of whom had come great distances to be with their teacher on his triumphant night.

With the Cloaks in the receiving line was his daughter, Andrea Cloak Nico, of New York. Also present were Arthur P. Remley, chairman of the Lawrence Board of Trustees, and his wife, Catherine, and Elmer Jennings, former chairman of the Board of Trustees.

After cocktails on the terrace, the guests moved into the clubhouse for dinner and a program, chaired by Prof. Joseph Hopfensperger, a long-time associate of Prof. Cloak in the theater department. Master of ceremonies was William Hirst Jr., of Milwaukee.

Hirst in turn introduced a procession of Lawrentians, each of whom told of one of Cloak's four decades at the University. Speaking for the graduates of the 1930s, Prof. George Walter recalled Prof. Cloak's early years, when he and other students were drawn "to a rising star who radiated zeal and love for us."

Miss Marguerite Schumann, recounting the 1940s, likened Prof. Cloak to Andre Malraux' "engaged man", in his wartime service on the home front. Speaking for the 1950s, Richard Boya declared: "No one should have been allowed to graduate from Lawrence without being involved in some way with Ted Cloak."

Said P. K. Allen, representing the 1960s: "The smile never left your face — or your heart. . . . You taught us to look into ourselves, and to use what we found to build another person."

James L. Fry, a present-day student, observed: "We shall always be indebted to our teacher and our friend, Mr. Cloak."

Congratulatory letters from three former presidents of Lawrence — Henry M. Wriston, Nathan Pusey and Douglas Knight — were read.

General chairman of the testimonial dinner was Prof. Joseph Hopfensperger. Working with him were Richard Boya, in charge of the reception; Anne K. O'Boyle, decorations and dinner; and George Walter, Program, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ducklow, Mrs. Tom Trettin and Mrs. Ken DuVall.

Present and former students of Prof. F. Theodore Cloak gathered at Riverview Country Club Saturday evening at a surprise testimonial dinner.

Joseph Hopfensperger, chairman of the F. Theodore Cloak dinner, chats with Mr. and Mrs. F. Stansbury Young. Some 130 persons attended the event, honoring Cloak on his retirement as head of the Lawrence department of theater.

Your Problems Secret Was Her Great-Grandmother's

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A few weeks ago a woman wrote to say her husband kept pestering her to have another baby. They had four boys and he was dying for a little girl. She said if someone would give her a guarantee that the next baby would be a girl she'd get pregnant again, but she sure as the world didn't want a fifth boy.

You told the woman there could be no guarantee and she'd have to take her chances. Well, Ann Landers, you are wrong. My great-grandmother told me the secret of producing a boy or a girl baby — whichever you want. And it works! (I have two of each.)

Landers

The left ovary produces boys. The right ovary produces girls. The minute a woman discovers she is pregnant (or even she suspects it) she should start to sleep on her left side if she wants a boy and her right side if she wants a girl. It's as easy as that! — Lucky Me

Dear You: Lucky is the word, all right, and that's what it was. Luck. The sex of a child is determined at the moment of conception. Once a woman is pregnant she can sleep on her head and it won't affect the sex of her unborn child.

DEAR ANN: Please settle an argument between my dad and me. I'm 21, have a good office job and live at home. I've been going with a very interesting guy who has had a bad marriage and is determined not to make another mistake. Jordie's ex-wife didn't know beans about housework or cooking or ironing and he wants to make sure I can please him. Every week Jordie brings over his shirts so I can practice. He is very fussy about the amount of starch in his collars and cuffs. We always go over the ironed shirts and discuss what I did wrong.

My father gets awfully mad when he sees me ironing Jordie's shirts. I say if I learn now it will save a lot of arguments later. Please express an opinion.

Pressing Problem
Dear Press: Practice on your dad's shirts. You can tackle the starch problem after you are married.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have four children, all born by Caesarean section. I'm so tired of hearing people say, "You took the easy way out, eh?" I could scream. There is nothing easy about a Caesarean. I'd rather have the other.

Yesterday I telephoned my neighbor who had had her first baby. The first thing she told me was that her next baby is going to be a Caesarean because she wouldn't go through labor again for anything in the world. I tried to tell her she was lucky she could have a normal birth. She got so furious she nearly hung up on me.

Will a doctor perform a Caesarean if a woman asks him to, even though she can have a baby the normal way? — Fertile Myrtle

Dear Myrtle: A Caesarean is major surgery and very few physicians will perform this operation unless it is absolutely necessary. Women who have had babies both ways say a normal birth is easier.

Mr. Psychologist, It Doesn't Work

BY ERMA BOMBECK

The child psychologists make child rearing sound so simple. The motivations are so logical. The patterns are so predictable. The solutions—so soluble. It makes me wonder why I am crazy about my kids only when they're asleep or nestled around the Christmas tree.

Child psychologist Haim Ginott, to whom I listen with such respect and admiration (because he deals with children and can still smile), recently pointed out that anyone can get in a fight with their own children. He said parents often ask for it in their very manner. For example, if there is a book on the floor, a parent should never say, "Pick up the book." He should simply point out "There is a book on the floor" thus giving the youngster the chance to respond in his own way.

What a civilized approach to responsibility. I decided to try it. Last week I purposely planted a book in the middle of the hallway.

My first son came bounding through the door, tripped over it and landed in a heap in the dining room. "There's a book on the floor, Mom. You oughta put it up before someone hurts themselves."

I was rather perplexed when my daughter arrived. I rebounded with, "There's a book on the floor."

"Aren't you the quick one," she giggled, stepping over it and heading toward the kitchen.

I had one last chance with the younger boy. (He's ten and learning to wave bye-bye now.)

"There's a book on the floor," I announced.

"Where?" he asked.

"Under your foot."

"How did it get there?" he snapped.

"I don't know. Someone must have dropped it." He started for his room.

"There's a book on the floor," I said again.

He leaned over it. "It isn't mine. I don't read junk with people kissing on the cover."

"It doesn't matter who it belongs to," I said. "Whenever you see a book on the floor you should put it away."

"I don't know where it belongs."

"How about the bookcase?"

"It isn't hurting anyone there."

"It nearly broke your brother's head."

"Then why didn't HE pick it up?"

"He's faster than you are. Look Clyde pick up the lousy book and put it away before I give you a rap!"

"If you wanted me to pick it up, why didn't you say so?" he said, grinning.

Shinwold Film Star Approaches Daringly

Y ALFRED SHINWOLD
Everybody knows that contact bridge favors aggressive players, but not everybody has the courage to practice what we preach. Film star Omar Sharif is said to approach a bridge hand as though it were a girl (they say that courage and healthy bank balance are useful in this sport also, but that does a poor bridge columnist know about this?), and perhaps his daring bid in today's hand proves the allegation.

Who has the nerve to bid a vulnerable opponent a vulnerable hand? If you've guessed that Sharif did it, you're right. The scene was an international bridge tournament in Beirut, recently, and Sharif knew that his partner had a long club suit. Sharif had 11 high-card points, and he knew that West needed all the remaining high cards of the deck for his opening bid of two notrump. West would never get in to take any embarrassing leads through the South hand.

If North had really good clubs, Sharif would be able to win about seven club tricks as the nucleus of his game is a trump. If North's clubs were ragged he would surely have a couple of side cards, and West would be unable to develop the stinging trick in a hurry.

Works as Expected

It worked as Sharif expected. West's opening lead of the jack of diamonds went to dummy's king, and Sharif led a low club to the ace. When the jack dropped, Sharif knew that the suit would run since West would not have opened two notrump with a singleton in clubs. Sharif switched to a low spade, and West could take only three aces. Sharif took the rest, making his game with an overtrick. Faint heart never won a game of bridge.

Daily Question

As dealer, you hold S—A J; W—A Q J 7; D—A J 10 8 3; C—Q J. What do you say?

Answer: Bid one diamond. The hand is a trifle light for an opening bid of two notrump, and the doubling of Q-J of clubs is a doubtful holding for such a bid. It is doubtful making a bid that is doubtful on two counts. (In the recent international tournament in Beirut, West actually bid 2-NT, but he lived to regret it—and so might you.)

FRED KNIPPEL ...AND A FEW OF HIS LIFE SAVERS

It all began in spring 1967. Fred Knippel, a salesman for Imperial Lithographing Corporation, became aware something was wrong with him. Fred went to see his doctor. Diagnosis: Kidney failure. Prognosis: 6 months to a year to live.

July, 1967. A break. At St. Luke's Hospital, Milwaukee, Fred became the first patient to benefit from their new "artificial kidney machine." 4 hours a day, twice a week, he underwent hemodialysis therapy. Cost? $400 per week. To the Knippels' surprise, Blue Cross covered it in full.

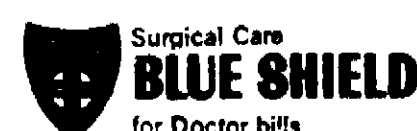

February, 1968. A dramatic decision. A kidney transplant operation. The donor: Fred's courageous sister. And on March 1 — 21 days after surgery, Fred was back at work. "Recalled to life," his gratitude knows no bounds.

About Blue Cross and Blue Shield, Fred says this: "I always thought they were like any insurance. With limits. Any minute, I expected to hear their coverage had gone as far as it could with me. The call never came. I learned later that Blue Cross and Blue Shield never cancelled anyone for the size of their claim. My portion of the hospital and doctor bills came to about $14,000 — Blue Cross and Blue Shield paid most of it."

Comments Leo J. Voell, President, Imperial Lithographing Corp., "The experience of Fred Knippel leaves no doubt in our minds as to the real worth of our Blue Cross and Blue Shield program. Whether our health care needs are routine or catastrophic, this is protection that works realistically, as it keeps pace with the rising costs of medical and hospital progress."

Bus Official Issues Blast at School Board

Closed Door Policy Charged When Contracts Awarded

The owner of Fox River Bus Lines made a scathing attack on the Appleton Board of Education Monday, charging it was "trying to run me out of business."

Olaf Lundquist, the bus line official, appeared before a handful of Appleton Area Chamber of Commerce officials to report on his area bus service program and recent request for a $39,000 subsidy from the city.

Lundquist, operator of one of the few private bus services remaining in Wisconsin, claims the school board is paying three smaller, rural school bus firms an estimated $60,000 a year to provide transportation for students, while his firm only got contracts amounting to $29,400.

Highly Critical
He was highly critical of Roland Knock, the fulltime transportation coordinator for the public school system.

Lundquist claimed that for years he has been attempting to get the school board to contract with him for all the student transportation the board has to underwrite annually.

He indicated with this additional income, it would enable his firm to continue to provide its regular urban and inter-urban service without municipal subsidy.

Take Bids
Lundquist told the Chamber group the school board should set minimum standards for the type of adequate bus service and then take bids. He said the board of education has "operated behind closed doors" when doling out bus transportation funds.

Knock defended the public schools bus transportation policy and said the board was not required to take bids.

The meeting was another in a series with city government committees and Chamber groups checking into the bus problem.

Recently, the city asked the Fox Valley Council of Governments (COG) to make a study of the bus situation in areas served by Fox River Lines, including Appleton, Grand Chute, Neenah, Menasha, Kimberly and others, and come up with recommendations.

Appleton-County Merger? Welfare Hearing Set

A public hearing on whether the Appleton Welfare Department should be merged into the Outagamie County Welfare Department will begin at 7 p.m. today.

Mrs. E.A. Dettman, 67, a long-time junior high school teacher, died suddenly Monday afternoon in Appleton.

The former Genevieve Webb of Appleton and McAllen, Tex., she was born April 27, 1902, in Poynette.

She taught mathematics for a brief period of time at Elmwood and Galesville, Wis., and then received her M.A. degree from University of Wisconsin. For the past 17 years, she has been a math teacher at Roosevelt Junior High School in Appleton.

She is survived by her husband, a former certified public accountant, and by one brother, one sister, and one sister-in-law.

Funeral services for Mrs. Dettman will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday from the Wichmann Funeral Home. Burial will be in Highland Memorial Park.

Friends may call at the funeral home from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday.

The city council's welfare ordinance committee will conduct the session in the council chambers, according to Ald. Walter Kalata (2nd), the committee chairman.

City Welfare Director Merton Ehrlicke has opposed dropping his department and having its operation absorbed by the county agency.

On the other hand, Mayor George Buckley long has recommended such a merger, pointing to other parts of the state where they have been successful.

Firemen Check Smoke Odor at Thimany Mill

KAUKAUNA — Firemen were called to the lower mill at Thimany Pulp and Paper Co. about 11:45 p.m. Saturday when workers thought they smelled smoke coming from a paper shredder.

repairing the leaks but Oliver Thomsen, Winnebago County trustee, complained about the firm's work.

Thomsen said the leaks were not fixed until the center's custodian went up on the roof and fixed it himself. He said the time involved in the custodian's work should be deducted from Gibson's bill.

This was agreed to by the trustees.

COG Hires Planner From Minneapolis

Kenneth Theine, a liaison planner between the Minneapolis City Planning commission and the Twin City Council of Governments, has been hired by the Fox Valley Council of Governments, effective next Monday.

Theine's duties with COG will include preparation of the regional housing study and other special project assignments.

He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and has completed his course work for a masters degree in urban and regional planning.

Abolishment of the unit relief system, such as the one in Appleton, has been recommended by several statewide government study groups, but opposed by some welfare organizations and administrators.

The Tarr Task Force, which studied local government and financing, recommended that all welfare should be dispensed on a countrywide basis, and there are bills pending in the legislature to make it mandatory. It now is optional.

Board Request
Recently, the Appleton Board of Health suggested there was merit in the county taking over the local relief services due to the low caseload. It asked the city council to study the possibility of a merger.

The May monthly report of the Appleton Welfare Department showed a caseload of 38, including 25 city charges and 13 county charges.

Last month the department's relief costs, services amounted to $4,880 and administration costs were $2,571. Refunds during May totaled $2,457.

revenue to finance the budget for the next biennium," Conradt said.

Avoid Dispute
At no time during his talk did Conradt allude to the stinging criticism he has received from Appleton officials and the Alliance of Cities, comprised of mayors and managers of the state's 20 most populated urban areas, for voting against Tarr Task Force recommendations and bills, including new annexation legislation.

However, during a question period following his talk, the three-term assemblyman said he did not think Appleton should progress at the expense of nearby towns.

"How long do you think the towns would exist without

Order to Close Jail Delayed Once More

State Gives August 12 'Time Credit'

MADISON—Outagamie County may continue to operate its jail as it is at least until Aug. 12, the date of the August county board meeting, although Wilbur Schmidt, secretary of the State Department of Health and Social Services, declined to call the action an extension of the jail closing order.

The action was taken here this morning at a meeting between Schmidt and members of the board's public protection committee.

Schmidt termed the action a "time credit" for the time lost during the abortive efforts to ward a joint city-county safety building. He said he recognized that those talks collapsed and that, as a result, time was lost.

Signed Contract
The last extension on the order to close the jail because the facility failed to meet state code requirements, was given March 21. Requirements of that extension were that an architect be hired within 30 days and definite action on construction.

Shopping Center Planned Street Extension Sparks Clash Between Alderman, Contractor

Capping a heated exchange with a southside alderman at city hall Monday afternoon, an Appleton developer - contractor said he had future plans for a shopping center with a $3 million price tag.

The southside development reportedly is earmarked for the 11th Ward.

Theodore Utschig, head of the construction firm bearing his name, made disclosure of the project after Ald. Arthur Hoolihan (11th) questioned his motives with regard to a street extension proposed in that area.

Pros and Cons
Utschig, whose firm is constructing a shopping complex adjacent to Park 'N' Market and Southside Pharmacy on Lawe Street, had suggested during a meeting of the street sanitation committee that the city make a turnaround at the end of Fairway Court rather than open it up to Lawe Street. Several residents of the area appeared before the committee. While some supported a through road from Fairway Court to Lawe Street, others opposed it.

The project is being considered for 1970 by the department of public works.

At one point it was disclosed the proposed court extension had been put on the official city map in 1965.

Motive Questioned
Hoolihan said he favored putting the Court through to Lawe Street and inferred Utschig had an ulterior motive in promoting a turnaround instead.

"I had a talk at one time with Utschig and he said not to extend Fairway Court because of his shopping center plans," Hoolihan said in a loud voice, "his suggestions here are a selfish motive on his part."

Utschig was quick to deny Hoolihan's statements and claimed they were without foundation. He then told of his plans to help beautify the area, along with eventual construction of the commercial center which would include a doctors' park.

Resents Attack
Utschig made it clear he highly resented the personal attack Hoolihan had made.

At one point the committee was informed a parking lot being built by Utschig was beginning to infringe on land earmarked for Fairway Court extension.

Utschig said he would hold up any further work until a decision is made on the Fairway Court extension. In the meantime, engineers in the department of public works will come up with a final recommendation.

Appleton Lions Hear Assemblyman Budget Compromise Dead: Conradt

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The death knell for the compromise state budget bill now before the Wisconsin Legislature was predicted here Monday by a controversial Outagamie County assemblyman.

"The assembly will not concur in (Bill) 95-2 brought in by Sen. Walter Hollander, R-Rosendale," Assemblyman Ervin Conradt, R-Shiocton, told members of the Noon Lions Club at the Conway Motor Inn.

Conradt said it was likely the assembly would vote down the budget restorations approved by the senate, and the budget of both houses.

"The big question is where are we going to raise the revenue to finance the budget for the next biennium," Conradt said.

At no time during his talk did Conradt allude to the stinging criticism he has received from Appleton officials and the Alliance of Cities, comprised of mayors and managers of the state's 20 most populated urban areas, for voting against Tarr Task Force recommendations and bills, including new annexation legislation.

However, during a question period following his talk, the three-term assemblyman said he did not think Appleton should progress at the expense of nearby towns.

"How long do you think the towns would exist without

"The big question is where are we going to raise the assemblyman said he was likely to be re-elected in 1970.

Conradt said he was likely to be re-elected in 1970.

"Whenever these annexation bills have come up, I have asked for one good reason why the city has to grow and never got an answer," Conradt declared. Later, however, he tempered his remarks by saying perhaps a compromise could be worked out in the next session.

Mayor George Buckley and Finance Director David Champion attended but refrained from participating in the question period.

Conradt's 3rd District includes some of Appleton's more populated northwest side wards with an estimated 15,000 population.

Fox Valley Campus to Enroll More Than 800 This Autumn

No Plans for Limiting Students; Registration Climbs 30 Per Cent

MENASHA — Fall enrollment at Fox Valley Campus "will exceed 800 without difficulty," Chancellor Edward Weidner of the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay told Fox Valley Campus trustees Monday.

Weidner said new enrollments presently are about 30 per cent higher than they were a year ago when the fall enrollment reached 725.

Capacity of the center is rated at 700, but Weidner indicated there are no plans for placing any limits on enrollment.

The record enrollment projections prompted trustees to call a special meeting the night of July 9 to discuss the enrollment and space problems at the center.

In answer to a question from Russell DeLaHunt, Kaukauna, Outagamie County trustee, as to how far the school could go above the 700 capacity without limiting enrollment, Weidner said "you can go indefinitely until you use up every chair from 7:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and on Saturday mornings."

Outdoor Physical Education
The Green Bay chancellor noted there is a policy on limiting student enrollment. But, he said, "it seems harsh to exclude students when they can be accommodated through more intensive space use."

Have there been any complaints from the students? DeLaHunt asked, in reference to the shortage of space. Weidner said the students have complained, particularly about the lack of library and physical education facilities. The library is woefully inadequate, he added, but books cannot be added because of the lack of space.

Presently there are no formal physical education facilities as such although some outdoor facilities will be built this summer.

Trustees accepted a bid of $9,167 from Badger Highways, Inc., Menasha, to construct a soccer field, softball diamond, two tennis courts, track and parking lot for 70 cars north of the classroom building. The land already is owned by the center.

The leaking roof problem also was solved Monday by trustees, although not happily.

Deduct Time
The center has been plagued with leakage around the skylights and at the roof seam connecting the old and new wings of the building.

Gibson Roofing Co., Oshkosh, had submitted a bill of $355 for repairing the leaks but Oliver Thomsen, Winnebago County trustee, complained about the firm's work.

Thomsen said the leaks were not fixed until the center's custodian went up on the roof and fixed it himself. He said the time involved in the custodian's work should be deducted from Gibson's bill.

This was agreed to by the trustees.

COG Hires Planner From Minneapolis

Kenneth Theine, a liaison planner between the Minneapolis City Planning commission and the Twin City Council of Governments, has been hired by the Fox Valley Council of Governments, effective next Monday.

Theine's duties with COG will include preparation of the regional housing study and other special project assignments.

He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and has completed his course work for a masters degree in urban and regional planning.

Theine, 26, previously worked with the Waukesha County planning staff and spent two years with the Peace Corps preparing regional economic development programs in Latin America. He is a native of Milwaukee.

Appleton to Contract for Services? Personnel Exodus Worries Officials

Fear was expressed by a group of city officials Monday night that unless the City of Appleton upgrades the salaries of key public works department personnel they will continue to move on to other jobs.

In recent months the department has been losing some of its top men to private industry and other municipalities.

The problem was discussed informally by members of the city council's finance committee, who inquired what the city personnel director was doing to get vacant positions filled.

"If we lose any more men from the engineering division, the city might be forced into the position of having to contract with a private concern for those services," Champion commented.

Committee members felt the time had come to take a look at the salary structure and come up with a formula to insure key personnel increments in line with the pay standards of their profession.

In the meantime, the city is continuing its search for a new public works director and a civil engineer.

And this fall it will be looking for an assistant public works director as result of an impending retirement.

Activities to Satisfy Every Type of interest are being offered on 16 playgrounds this summer by the Appleton Recreation Department, for all ages, grades 1 through high school. Registering on the first day of the program at Bellaire Park, the newest summer playground, with Miss Barbara Marten, playground leader, top, are Mrs. Leroy St. Louis, and her two sons, Jeff and Jon. Two youngsters bottom, left, with a bent for art, engage in the arts and crafts program. Engrossed in their coloring books are Kathy Strelow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Strelow, and Randy Reichardt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rodger Reichardt. Engaged in football warmup, bottom left, are Cory Kukinski, leader; Randy and Terry Ernst, and Tom Saunders. Activities included in the summer program include arts and crafts, special events such as ice cream socials and trips, and organized games. The recreation department also conducts programs at four other centers for handicapped children. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Downtown Plan May be Adopted By City Tonight

MENASHA — The downtown redevelopment plan apparently has at least the eight favorable votes it needs to be adopted at tonight's common council meeting.

In a 7-2 vote against making a redevelopment referendum a special order of business tonight, the common council Monday telegraphed the probable outcome of tonight's vote on the plan itself.

Ald. Robert Winarski and Felix Ropella Jr., voted in favor of putting Winarski's referendum proposal on the agenda tonight ahead of the vote on the project plan.

Voting against the referendum proposal were Alds. Herbert Batley, Andrew (Bud) DeLeeuw, Richard Heindl, Ernest Koerner, Donald Kuehl, Sumner Parker and Walter Remmel.

Absent were Alds. William Erickson, Ronald Scheurle and Raymond Zielinski.

Leave Hospital
Scheurle, who reportedly favors adoption of the plan, is expected to be present for tonight's vote.

Erickson, who also has hinted he would vote favorably, was hospitalized Monday but Mayor John Klein said today the veteran Third Ward representative has received his doctor's permission to leave the hospital to vote tonight.

Zielinski is out of the city on vacation and is expected to be the only alderman of the 12 absent tonight.

Steffens brought out Monday that Wisconsin law is without a provision for absentee ballots to be cast by officials on government bodies.

If both Scheurle and Erickson are present and cast votes for adoption tonight, and the remaining nine cast ballots along the same lines set in Monday night's vote on the referendum proposal, the measure would pass 9-2. At least eight aldermen must vote for adoption for the plan to pass.

Mis-statement

The Monday night vote came as the result of an apparent mis-statement by Winarski. The Sixth Ward opponent of the project could have exercised his aldermanic prerogative to have the question of holding a referendum placed on the agenda of tonight's meeting, without the council voting.

But, because he began his request with the words, "I move," and Ald. Ropella entered a second to the motion, it was brought to a vote by Mayor John Klein. City Atty. Richard Steffens ruled that the mayor was within his rights.

Ropella withdrew his second at the last minute in an apparent attempt to prevent a vote. But, Ald. Sumner Parker quickly entered his own second, forcing the vote.

Referendum Push

Requests for a referendum have come frequently as tonight's vote on the plan drew near. Opponents also have been gathering signatures on "petitions," including one turned in by First Ward Ald. DeLeeuw Monday. Circulated by Anthony Desch, 434 Sixth St., it lists 144 First and Second Ward residents opposing the project.

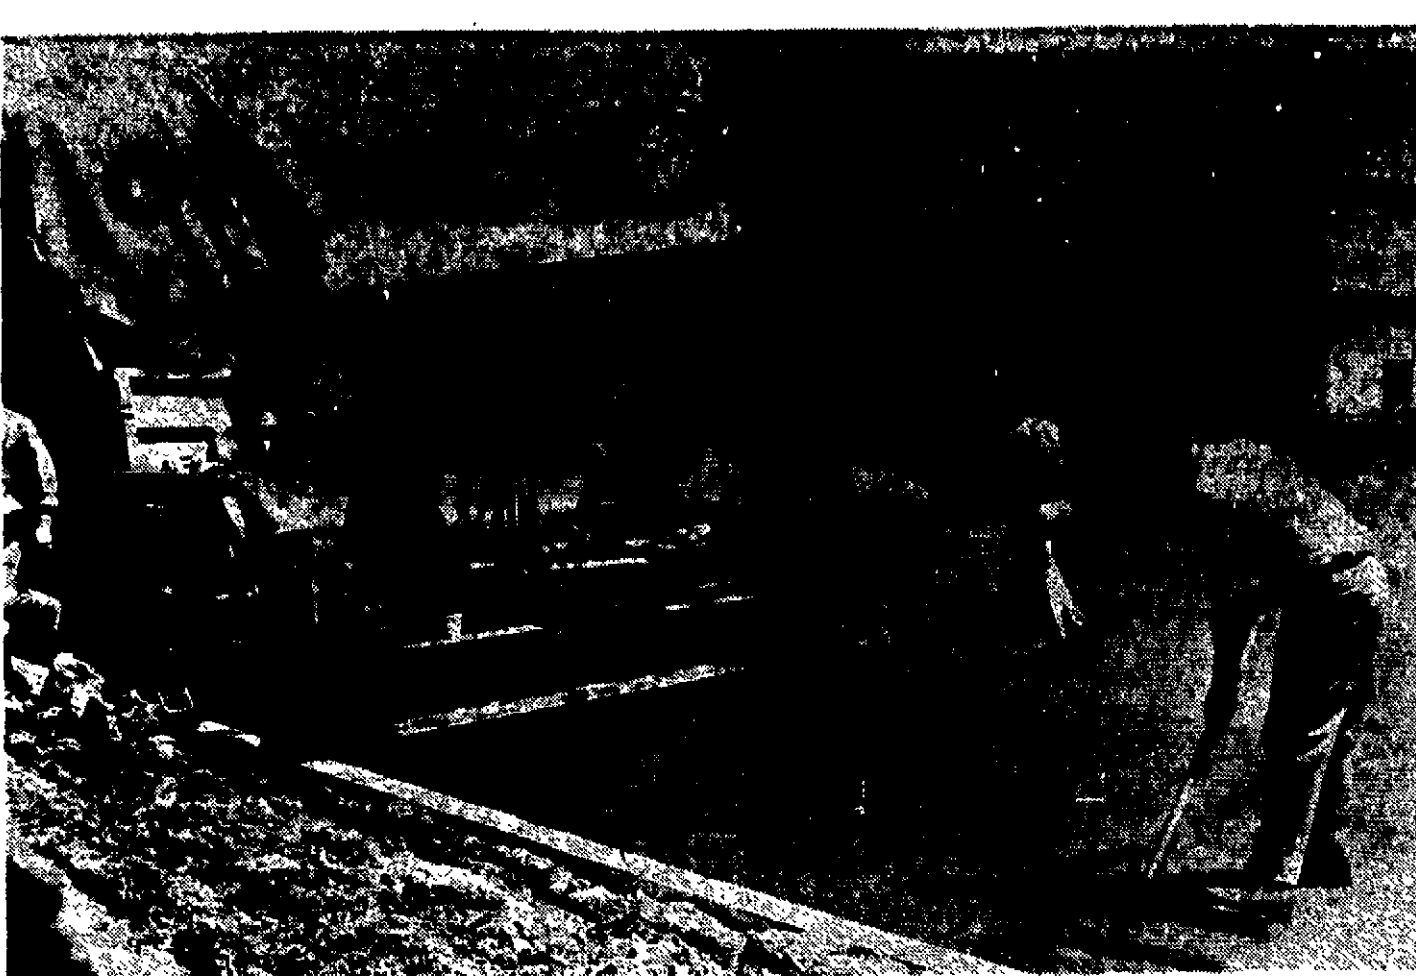

David A. Meyer, 728 Eleventh St., who recently proposed a downtown zoo, announced in a letter to the mayor with copies sent to local newspapers, that he, too, has circulated a petition. His letter did not mention the number of signatures, and the mayor said he had not yet received the petition.

Spot-Zoning

Winarski prefaced his maneuver for a referendum with warnings that relocating downtown occupants during the reconstruction period would mean building temporary structures on vacant lots, which would have to be spot-zoned for the new uses. The result, he forecast, would be "spot-zoning this city to death."

The mayor and Alds. Donald Kuehl and Walter Remmel, both council representatives on the redevelopment authority (MRA), attempted to quiet Winarski's fears. Remmel told him, "We're still in control as a council."

Ald. Parker said that in his conversations with citizens, they "almost without exception" be-

Police Nab Burglar With An Appetite

NEENAH — A 17-year-old Menasha boy admitted burglarizing Boehm's Market, 203 W. Wisconsin Ave., after police arrested him following a short chase early this morning.

The youth, who has been referred to juvenile authorities, admitted smashing a rear door at Boehm's and taking three six packs of soda pop about 3:45 a.m. today.

Police were alerted by the night watchmen at nearby Bergstrom Paper Co. who saw the youth leaving the market. An officer arrived quickly, observed the smashed door, and started looking for the burglar.

The officer saw a boy carrying a box along Canal St. He dropped the box and ran when the officer drove along side. Other patrol cars were summoned, and the youth was captured after a short chase.

Police said the box contained the soda pop and a small flashlight. The youth told police he broke into the store because "he wanted to get something to eat."

In their comments about the proposal with the words, "Menasha really needs redevelopment, but..."

Bridge Action Deferred Until Final Report From Engineers

OSHKOSH — Over the strenuous objections of Supv. Roland Kampo, the special Little Lake Butte des Morts Bridge Committee Monday afternoon voted to defer action on the proposed 1,200 foot span pending a final report from the engineers.

After learning that the bridge, to provide access to U.S. 41 from a site located 1,000 feet north of Ninth Street in the Town of Menasha, could cost anywhere from $3 million to $4 million, the committee decided against making any recommendations to the county board on Thursday.

State Funds?

Instead, the committee will await detailed bridge costs from Owen Ayres Associates, Eau Claire, then approach the State Highway Commission to seek possible state funding (one-third) for the project.

In April, the county board deferred a resolution of Kampo's for 60 days pending a preliminary cost projection on the bridge. The resolution called for the county board to go on record favoring the expenditure of approximately $2.5 million for the bridge.

Earlier, the county board allocated $100,000 for engineering services and appraisal work for the proposed span.

Voting for another delay were Supvs. A. J. Kornder, Lyle Raddatz, Arthur E. Struensee and Floyd Shurbert, of the Oshkosh area, and Clarence Loehning of Neenah. Kampo, Town of Menasha chairman, voiced the only "no" vote.

Kampo urged the committee to recommend passage of the resolution expending $2.5 million for the bridge at the county board meeting. "Then we could send representatives to Madison armed with the county intent and commitment to see this project through."

The town chairman theorized that another delay for 30 or more days on the final engineering report would hinder the county's bargaining position with the state for aid on the bridge plan.

'Stacked Deck'

Noticeably dismayed over the committee's action on Monday, Kampo said after the meeting: "This is what I mean by a stacked deck." He was referring to the majority Oshkosh supervisors on the combined county highway committee which also comprises the special bridge study committee.

After making a motion for delaying any recommendations to the county board, Struensee said, "I'm not trying to delay work on the bridge. I just want to know where we're going."

Those concurring with Struensee believe it would be more beneficial to have maps, and other specifications from the engineers before furthering action on the bridge.

Young Man Is Taken To Hospital by Squad

A 21-year-old Appleton man who was scheduled for military induction today was taken to Appleton Memorial Hospital by the fire department squad about 2:10 a.m.

The youth was in a dazed condition when taken to the hospital. Police investigated.

$2.8 Million Terminal Plan Goes to Board In Winnebago County

OSHKOSH — A new terminal building at the Winnebago County Airport — costing more than $2.8 million — will be sought by the aviation committee Thursday at a meeting of the county board.

On the motion of Oshkosh Supv. Kenneth Seefeld, the committee late Monday afternoon unanimously approved one of the terminal schemes which has been under consideration the past several months.

$1,100 Square Feet

This "scheme" would provide a terminal encompassing 91,100 square feet with total construction costs of $2,377,400. Also to be added to the amount is $266,750 for landscaping and parking, and $200,000 for legal, architect, engineering and consulting fees, bringing the total outlay to $2,844,150.

The committee had been considering six plans submitted by the architectural firm of Howard Needles, Tammen & Bergendoff. These schemes ranged in cost from the most elaborate, $3,085,400, to $2,051,000 and in total square feet from 113,052 to 81,150.

Wants Smallest

Airport Manager Michael T. Brock asked the committee to approve the smallest of the schemes, costing $2,051,000.

This plan would include one second level passenger loading area and half the first level passenger hold area. Also, excluded would be a canopy costing an estimated $48,000, and half the baggage claim area and portion of the restaurant.

'Adequate' Size

Brock indicated that the least expensive of the six schemes "would be adequate" and the "minimum area we can safely recommend" to the board.

However, Seefeld, in citing increasing construction costs, said it would be "penny-wise and pound-foolish" not to consider building for the future. He noted that "scheme three" (the one approved by the committee) would be needed "seven years from now."

The Oshkosh supervisor also said he was against the outside canopy, and after discussion, the canopy ($48,000) a originally designed on the plan, was deleted.

Brock said the terminal

"would be healthy" for the county. He estimated that $800,000 revenue would be produced annually "if all potential space is leased."

And, the airport manager also mentioned that the rent figures which were slightly lower are presently being realized at the Madison and Green Bay ports.

Brock said all six architectural schemes would be presented to the board. However, emphasis will be placed on adopting the $2.8-plus plan recommended here Monday. Needles also is expected to be present at the board session.

Scaled-Down Version

The decision of the committee Monday was somewhat surprising considering they favored presenting a "slightly scaled-down" terminal plan at the June meeting.

It was disclosed to the committee that the airport has been classified as one of 31 ports in the country without fire protection on the field, according to the Airline Pilots Association (ALPA).

Brock said he has discussed the possibility of the city stationing a fire truck at the airport but no agreement yet has been made.

"I think we have good protection right now," Brock said. He noted that "we can get a fire truck on the field, if needed, in three to four minutes."

Additional Floor Being Built Which Boosts Capacity to 643

Upper decks of Appleton's 600, is expected to be completed before Thanksgiving.

City officials said today the addition, which will cost $510,

Police Looking for Would-be Burglar Who Suffered Serious Cut

Appleton detectives Monday requested assistance in finding a would-be burglar who apparently was injured attempting to break into the Fox Oil and Gas Co. Inc., 926 W. College Ave.

The burglary attempt was discovered early Sunday. Police, who found a broken window, followed a blood trail north on Badger Avenue. Based on the amount of blood at the scene, police determined that the subject may have suffered a serious cut.

Police said they checked hospitals, but could find no trace of anyone seeking medical assistance for injuries that may have been suffered at the service station. Anyone having information they feel might aid in finding the subject is asked to contact the police department.

Close Criticizes

On the heels of the start of the ramp project, which will tie in with the construction of a new Gimbel's Department Store building, city officials, Appleton Area Chamber of Commerce and the Downtown Retail Merchants Association were again criticized by W. A. Close, an East College Avenue merchant, who charged the Soldiers Square Ramp should be getting more use, but is not due to laxity of the various groups in promoting it.

Close also made recommendations related to changing the traffic pattern within the million dollar ramp to eliminate some motorists having to drive to the third level before being able to get onto the Oneida Street exit ramp.

Village Grass Fire

LITTLE CHUTE — Volunteer firemen were called about noon Sunday to extinguish a grass fire south of Outagamie County Trunk OO and west of Buchanan Street in a marshy area. No damage resulted.

Stretching Out From Appleton's Buchanan Street is the rough surface of the E. College Avenue extension toward Kaukauna. Two lanes of the planned four-lane highway, which will be separated by a boulevard, will be completed this summer and the other two next summer. The extension, part of the proposed 32-mile Tri-County Expressway, is being built by the Outagamie County highway department.

Consider Dean At Fox Valley

Chancellor Declares Selection May Be Made Within Week

MENASHA — Selection of a new dean for the Fox Valley Campus may be made by the end of this week or the first part of next week, according to Chancellor Edward W. Weidner of the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

Weidner told the campus trustees that both candidates still under consideration were still interested in the post being vacated by Dean Harry Hutson.

Russell DeLaHunt, Kaukauna, Outagamie County trustee, questioned the advisability of having students involved in the selection of the new dean.

Not Unusual

Interviews of the candidates were conducted by a committee composed of faculty members, students and trustees.

Weidner said it no longer was unusual to include students on the selection committee and their participation did not involve running the university.

"The dean is in constant contact with students," the chancellor said, "and it is useful to get their viewpoint."

Many times, he added, the students bring up items in an interview which are often overlooked.

Other members of the trustees were split in their feelings on having students participate. Oliver Thomsen, a Winnebago County trustee, said he supported the idea while Herbert Helble, an Outagamie County trustee, said he was disappointed in the results.

Salary Problem

Weidner said several of the candidates commented that it was the first time they had faced an interview committee composed of other than just faculty and student members.

He also warned the trustees the biggest problem in getting either of the candidates will be salary. He said the University of Wisconsin salary scale is not high in comparison to other universities, particularly in fringe benefits.

However, he added, the reputation of the university as an academic institution has quite often been enough to offset the salary disadvantage.

Ran Away 6 Times Judge Sends Girl To Home for Girls

A 14-year-old girl who went on a beer party and spent several days in Milwaukee after running away from a Neenah foster home, Monday afternoon was told she was being sent to a home for girls in Green Bay.

Outagamie County Judge Raymond P. Dohr, of the Juvenile Court, continued the girl's custody under the county department of social services.

Capt. Donald F. Schmidt of the Neenah Police Department testified that the girl ran away from the foster home on May 25 and was returned May 29.

Testimony revealed that she accompanied other youths on a beer drinking party near Neenah then went to Milwaukee where she stayed at a friend's apartment. She was taken into custody by Milwaukee police. The youth who purchased the beer reportedly will be charged.

'Firm Hand'

The girl's father asked the court to return her home. He said he would take a "firm hand" with her.

A welfare case worker, noting that the girl had run away about six times, told the court she "... has more problems than we or her parents can provide for."

The caseworker recommended the girl be sent to the Green Bay home.

The girl, who had been in Juvenile Court earlier, was placed in the group foster home last February. She and an older sister had run away last December.

Dohr continued her welfare custody for one year. He said he would extend the time if necessary.

"I think you should be home," Dohr told the girl, "but you've demonstrated you don't want to be there."

plans be taken within another 60 days, or by June 21.

Schmidt said a signed contract with an architect was presented to him this morning, the first time this step has been taken.

The public properties committee was authorized by the county board to hire an architect and selected Sauter Seaborn Architects, Ltd., Appleton, to conduct studies on various alternative methods of solving the jail problems.

Half-dozen

Supv. Jerome Hiler, Appleton, chairman of the public properties committee, told the county board at its June meeting the committee had asked the architect to prepare a half-dozen alternatives, and to settle the question of whether an addition can be put atop the courthouse.

Schmidt said a letter will be prepared and sent to the committee and to County Board Chairman Sylvester Esler, Appleton, informing them of his action today.

"This does not change the conditions of the March extension," Schmidt said, "it only credits them time lost when the previous talks failed."

The original closing order on the jail was issued more than a year ago. Several extensions of that order have been granted.

Appleton Mayor Cool Toward Supplying Water for Plant

A request of Fox Valley Construction Co. to hook onto a city water hydrant for a temporary plant site in the Town of Grand Chute got the cold shoulder from Appleton city officials this morning.

"I have been informed this service is to be for a batch plant while work is being done on some streets," Mayor George Buckley commented. He didn't know if they were city or town streets.

"However, I cannot see how the city can legally hold itself out and set a precedent to supply water for something outside the city limits," Buckley added.

From Grand Chute

He raised the question why the water could not be obtained by the firm from the Town of Grand Chute.

Grand Chute relies on wells and does not have a water utility.

Buckley also questioned using a hydrant the fire department relies on in the event of a fire in the area of Wisconsin and Badger avenues.

Buckley said he has nothing against the construction firm, but felt as mayor it was his interests even if the concern wanted to pay for the water service.

Triggering the mayor's strong stance against any services across the city line was a letter R. D. DeLand, water commission chairman, sent to the city clerk explaining the proposal.

The mayor asked the board of public works to act on the request this afternoon.

General Sales Tax

During his talk, he said the only fair tax to impose to raise more revenue is a general sales tax, declaring, "Wisconsin for many years has been missing the boat in this respect."

Wisconsin has a selective 3 per cent sales tax while neighboring states have general sales taxes.

Conradt said he did not favor a 1 per cent increase in the existing selective tax because it would not raise enough funds to operate the state in the next biennium.

On a general sales tax, he would advocate exempting food and drugs, Conradt said, and have those with less than $3,000 annual income also exempt.

He defended the assembly's action of killing a proposal to boost the beer tax, citing there already is a $9 federal and $1 state, plus sales and excise taxes, on every barrel of beer in Wisconsin.

Small Breweries

"Small breweries could no longer exist if the tax were increased," Conradt said. He also cautioned that adding any more to the beer taxes might force an important segment of industry and the economy out of Wisconsin.

"We want to keep industry, rather than tax them out of the state," Conradt said. He suggested the federal government forgive $3 per barrel and turn that tax money over to the state for distribution in Wisconsin.

Conradt said he opposed raising the income taxes of the middle bracket earners.

The 3rd District lawmaker also observed that:

"Hard, Fast Rules"

—The legislature already has passed some bills arising out of sit-ins and demonstrations and warned that if the University of Wisconsin Board of Regents did not take the initiative in enforcing "hard, fast rules," the state's governing body would pass still stiffer laws.

—There is a taxpayers' rebellion underway, making it more imperative to "live within our means and balance the budget."

—It is the responsibility of cities, such as Appleton, to carry on a program of education and inform the people in nearby towns of the benefits they will have by belonging to the city. This would be the only alternative to force annexation, which he strongly opposed.

Britain Will Map Strategy for Bid to Common Market

EASTBOURNE, England (AP)— Britain is summoning envoys from key continental countries to appraise policy and tactics for a new bid to win entry into the European Common Market, informants said today.

The move came after Prime Minister Harold Wilson signaled President-elect Georges Pompidou of France that Britain is ready to begin the process of British-French reconciliation. London hopes Charles de Gaulle's successor will remove the French veto on British entry.

Political sources said Wilson is likely to follow up his offer with a suggestion to meet Pompidou this summer, but only if Christopher Soames, Britain's ambassador to France, judges it will prove productive.

Meet in London
Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart and his chief Common Market negotiator, Lord Chalfont, will meet in London with British envoys from the continent after Pompidou's new government is formed and after Soames has had a chance to meet France's new premier and foreign minister, the informants said.

The envoys being summoned home are said to include those from the six Common Market capitals and possibly from some of the key member countries in the European Free Trade Association (EFTA).

The EFTA links Britain with the Scandinavian countries, Austria, Switzerland and Portugal. From its inception, Norway, Britain and Denmark have felt the EFTA is only second-best and want to join an enlarged Common Market.

Several continental political leaders attending the 11th Congress of The Socialist International here are waiting to hear how Britain proposes to achieve wider European unity. About 30 of the 50 Socialist parties of the world are attending the congress, representing combined voting strength of 75 million.

Sources at the congress said some Scandinavian Socialists fear the British may decide to push their own application for membership in the Common Market without regard for their EFTA allies.

Plans Suggest State Fair Site Be Relocated

Department Hears Only Three Ideas In Starting Search

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A search for methods of building a new state fair with private funds rounded its first turn Monday with the Department of Local Affairs and Development receiving only three sets of suggestions.

Each of the three proposals submitted by private sources, however, recommends that Wisconsin give up hope of satisfactorily rebuilding the existing facilities at crowded State Fair Park in suburban West Allis.

If the trio of plans carries any weight with fair officials, it could represent another step toward moving the exposition from its aging West Allis site to a new fairgrounds, designed to have more room and to be more easily used for year-round activities.

Set Deadline
The department, however, has expressed concern about whether there might be some statutory restrictions on the use of private funds for a relocation. The department set Monday as the deadline for receiving suggestions from private groups.

A Milwaukee realtor, saying he represents a private group eager to make a deal with the state, submitted plans for development of a 600-acre site under lease agreements with Wisconsin.

A Milwaukee fund-raising concern suggested a statewide campaign for soliciting financial contributions. The firm said it would want a fee of $1.6 million.

The third proposal involves a $50,000 pledge from a camping trailer agency toward what it suggested as inclusion of a recreation center in any new fair plans.

The Department of Local Affairs and Development has drawn up a guideline for private involvement in fair development, and has suggested potential investors think in terms of a 640-acre site in Milwaukee County.

James McKinnon, an administrative officer with the department, said the state exposition advisory board is to meet June 30 to consider the three proposals.

He indicated disappointment that the department hadn't received more suggestions, and added: "Out of fairness to those who have submitted proposals, we should move as quickly as possible on this."

Fair problems have been accumulating for exposition officials. Last year, they faced the possibility of having some buildings declared off-limits because of building code violations produced by the wear and tear of age.

West Allis has said it does not want the fair to move, but is opposed to any expansion plans which would eliminate residential areas.

A variety of new fair plans include setting up a regional net-

Gave Order to Turn Evans Officer Refuses To Testify Before Board

SUBIC BAY, Philippines (AP) — Lt. (j.g.) Ronald C. Ramsey, deck officer of the U.S. destroyer Frank E. Evans on the night she was sliced in half by the Australian aircraft carrier Melbourne, declined to testify today before the investigating board and asked to be permanently excused from the hearings.

Ramsey, 24, who has been advised he is "suspected of negligence" in the collision, claimed his constitutional rights had been violated. His attorney, Navy Lt. Frederick Tilton, 27, said Ramsey decided not to testify because he had been denied access to testimony from previous witnesses, refused the right to cross-examine witnesses and refused the right to recall witnesses.

Both Ramsey and another Evans officer, Lt. (j.g.) James A. Hopson, have been advised by the board they were "suspected of negligence" in the collision. The board has no punitive powers.

Its findings will be sent to higher authorities in the United States and Australia, where subsequent investigations or courts martial may be held.

Permanently Excused
The lawyer said Ramsey's request to be permanently excused was "based not on what we know, but what we don't know and must know."

The joint U.S.-Australian board recessed to consider his request and a spokesman later work of fairs at a number of sites, each one devoted to a particular division of the existing exposition.

Several southeastern Wisconsin communities have offered sites for study, should a decision be made to move the fair out of the Milwaukee area.

For Adultery, Against Cycle Helmets Hippie-Poet-Lawyer Fights For Unconventional Causes

MADISON (AP)— Edward Elson looks like a hippie, talks like a poet and fights like a lawyer—which he is.

The unconventional ideas of the one-time former candidate for mayor frequently set him at odds with the law: he is now preparing an appeal of his conviction for violating the Wisconsin law requiring motorcycle riders to wear helmets.

He ran for mayor of Madison last fall on the theory, "I'd be less of a mayor than anyone."

Elson, 28, claims the motorcycle helmet law denies a man the right to take a chance with his life and exceeds the realm of government's rule-making authority.

Sketches History
"The idea was that the only kind of action government could proscribe was conduct that interfered with your neighbor," Elson emphasized, sketching the history of American legal philosophy.

If the government can make you wear a motorcycle helmet for your own protection, it could also require galoshes in rainy weather, Elson reasons. Such philosophy would also sanction the less far-fetched compulsory seat-belt law proposed by Gov. Warren P. Knowles, he notes.

Mandatory motorcycle helmets are only one of what Elson considers "illegal laws."

Other involve marriage, nudity, mandatory public education and the prohibition against the use of marijuana.

All are holdovers from medieval days when serfs belonged to lords and people were treated as property, he maintains.

Elson concedes that he enjoys "saying things to shock people" and one of the things he frequently says is that "adultery is a beautiful thing."

"The more love a person gives, the more he has to give," Elson explains. "We've always viewed love as some commodity like gold—the scarcer the more valuable. But it just doesn't work that way."

Compulsory school attendance laws, Elson believes, were developed in an age when they were necessary—when industry abused child labor—and should have been repealed.

"If I were a legislator, I'd realize you had to get the bad law off the books," Elson said. He considers anti-marijuana statutes "bad law."

"So many people are framed outside the law, it's breeding disrespect for law in general," he says.

Ran for Mayor
Elson, who runs a specialty store near the University of Wisconsin campus, said he tends to do whatever "moves" him. His store, which is supposed to be open at 10 a.m. sometimes opens after noon. He decided to run for mayor because "I woke up one morning and decided: Madison needs me. I'd be less of a mayor than anyone."

Laws and regulations which limit individual behavior will lead to revolution, Elson thinks. "If the state is going to take all the adventure out of my life, it will be meaningless. They'll breed revolution by making life insipid."

Elson denies that life itself is a value, but rather "the process that happens during life makes it valuable."

"I'm not content to go out into space vicariously with our astronauts," he said. "I want to be an adventurer myself."

Although his store caters to the fashion tastes of radicals—and he frequently wears African chiefs' robes, gold-braided ankle-length coats and other off-beat attire, Elson said he is probably "closer to the individualist Barry Goldwater than to the leftist, aristocratic Eugene McCarthy."

His patrons seem to him to be "copping out—programming themselves negatively. They associate the tragic vision with pain and suffering."

"They're riding shotgun on someone else's trip," he explained.

Elson, who received a Doctor of Laws degree from the UW Law School two years ago, said he "set up practice in the Rathskellar with an electric typewriter."

The Rathskellar is an indoor "beer garden" in the Student Union building.

Includes Students
His clients have included many university students involved in student demonstrations.

Elson dates his compassion for the downtrodden to childhood days in New York when he went dime-store hopping, freeing hamsters and parakeets.

He said he began limiting his law practice when it occurred to him that lawyers "capitalize off misery."

"When a man's got all kinds of trouble, all he needs is an expensive lawyer," he said he told himself.

When he began practicing less, Elson said he borrowed $500 from his mother to start a poster shop which grew into the clothing and novelties shop he now runs.

"I've done incredibly well," Elson said, as if surprised at his good fortune.

Armstrong Ready To Go to Moon

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Neil A. Armstrong, commander of the Apollo 11 mission, has completed a series of flights in a landing trainer and says he feels ready to try the touchdown on the moon.

Armstrong flew the lunar landing training vehicle (LLTV) three times Monday, each time reaching 300 feet in altitude before practicing the powered descent he'll use next month to reach the moon's surface.

These brought to eight his flights in the spider-like craft.

"We're getting a very high level of confidence in the overall landing maneuver," Armstrong told newsmen after his second flight Monday.

Benchwarmers Star For Braves in Two Wins Over Astros

BY HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

If there's anything wrong with the Atlanta Braves' bench it must be termites in the wood.

It can't be the folks sitting on it, for there reclining in the Atlanta dugout Monday night were Hank Aaron, Orlando Cepeda and Felipe Alou while the regular benchwarmers were out on the field mauling Houston 6-2 and 8-4 in a two-night doubleheader.

Aaron, who played in all of the Braves' first 58 games, and Cepeda, who missed only one, never budged, except for a few trips to the water cooler. Alou, who has been sidelined with a fractured hand, saw action late in each game for defensive purposes.

"I've always said we had a good bench and I think they proved that tonight," said manager Luman Harris after the Braves boosted their lead in the National League West to 2½ games over Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Elsewhere in the NL, San Diego edged the Dodgers 3-2 in 13 innings. Cincinnati outslugged the Giants 8-6. Pittsburgh nipped the Chicago Cubs 9-8 and St. Louis blanked Montreal 3-0. The New York Mets and Philadelphia were not scheduled.

4 Hits for Lum
While Aaron and Cepeda were enjoying the view as spectators, right fielder Mike Lum collected four hits and drove in a run and first baseman Tommie Aaron, Hank's kid brother, singled home a run in the first game and slammed his first homer of the season in the nightcap.

The key blows, however, were struck by Tony Gonzalez, acquired in a trade with San Diego over the weekend. Gonzalez smacked two home runs and drove in three runs in the opener as Phil Niekro became the major leagues' first 11-game winner.

Then, he drilled a two-run single that put Atlanta ahead in the second inning of the nightcap and before the side was out eight runs had crossed the plate. Rico Carty belted a three-run homer and Tommie Aaron's homer accounted for the final run.

"I rested Aaron and Cepeda because they've played an awful lot of baseball lately and we have another doubleheader coming up Sunday against San Francisco," explained Harris.

"We play the Giants four games in three days, then play Los Angeles three games. I want those two guys well rested for that."

Gonzalez, who might join the benchwarmers soon despite his hot bat, is making the most of his opportunity.

"It's a great feeling to come in and help a team right away," he said. "I'm thankful for the

Gutteridge Would Like to Take County Stadium Back to Chicago

By BOB GREENE
MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — If Manager Don Gutteridge owned the Chicago White Sox, he would move them immediately to Milwaukee.

The Sox snapped a four-game losing streak Monday night by crushing the Seattle Pilots, 8-3. It was Chicago's fifth straight victory this season in Milwaukee County Stadium.

"I don't know what it is," Gutteridge said. "If I could, I would take this stadium back to Chicago and nail it down."

Billy Wynne, making his first American League start, went in the distance for Chicago, the first complete game a White Sox pitcher has thrown since June 4 when Tommy John turned the trick against the Boston Red Sox.

Praises Wynne
Wynne gave up eight hits and three runs, but three Chicago double plays and several outstanding fielding gems kept the Sox from getting into too much trouble.

Gutteridge praised Wynne, whose only previous major league start was for the New York Mets two years ago.

"That gives us a big lift," the Chicago manager said. "It gives the whole team spirit, and also lets our bullpen get a little rest."

While he can't explain the Milwaukee winning streak by his Pale Hose, Gutteridge has figured out why the White Sox are winning here this year after posting only one victory in last season's special series in Milwaukee.

Doesn't Know
"Last year we were coming up here on a bus past in time for the game," he said.

"Now we leave home one hour earlier and the boys have a chance to sit around the clubhouse and get in the proper mood. We are a little more relaxed."

"But why we are winning here now and not in Chicago, I don't know," Gutteridge said. "Maybe we ought to play more games here."

Lombardi Displays Old Flair During Initial Redskin Drills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vince Lombardi was back again Monday on the playing field as a football coach and the Washington Redskins soon found out his year of retirement hadn't left him rusty.

"Look to the ball . . . look to the ball," Lombardi barked when a young player dropped a pass. "You've got your eyes someplace else. You have to look for the ball."

Then, in typical Lombardi style, he called running back-ceiver Bobby Mitchell to him and began tossing the ball underhand to him and catching Mitchell's return throw.

"See, you have to keep your eyes on the ball," Lombardi said, emphasizing his comments by bringing his head down toward the ball as he caught it.

He then went down the line of receivers waiting to go out for a pass, tossing the ball to each of them and saying: "Keep your eyes on the ball."

Short Retirement
Lombardi signed on as coach, general manager and part owner of the Redskins in February after one year on the sidelines.

He retired as coach after his Green Bay Packers won their third straight National Football League title in 1967.

His team never finished worse than third in his nine coaching years at Green Bay. Under former head coach Otto Graham, the Redskins progressively deteriorated—7-7 his first year, 5-6-3 in 1967 and 5-9 last season.

Now, for the first time since his retirement, he was back on a field as coach again.

Lombardi, wearing a sweat pants, tee shirt and baseball cap began Monday a three-day workout for passers, receivers and defensive backs during which, he said, "We will try to place the men in their right positions." But he said the camp would not be used for cutting any of the 50-odd players from the squad.

The players attend classroom study during the morning and work out at Georgetown University in the afternoon.

"We did this at Green Bay. We were the first to do it and now all the teams do it," he said.

"Those eight runs we got really helped me," Wynne said. "I wasn't pitching too well, but with that big lead I could stick with my fast ball."

Cubs' Pitching Collapses Again

Pirates Score Triumph Over Division Leaders

CHICAGO (AP)—All of a sudden the Chicago Cubs might not be shoo-ins for the National League pennant.

They dropped a 9-8 decision at Pittsburgh Monday night as their pitching again collapsed in the late innings.

While the Cubs were suffering defeat, the Chicago White Sox scored an 8-3 victory over the Seattle Pilots in Milwaukee.

The Cubs took a 2-0 lead in the first inning but the Pirates bombed out Dick Selma in their half of the first to take a 6-2 lead.

From then on Cub pitching held the Pirates in check as the Cubs scored three runs in the fourth and finally took a 7-6 lead on Randy Hundley's two-run homer in the seventh.

But Al Oliver's two-run homer highlighted a three-run eighth and sent the Pirates spinning to victory.

The Cubs and Pirates will engage in a two-night doubleheader today with Ken Holtzman (10-1) and Rich Nye (0-3) facing Pittsburgh's Bob Veale (3-7) and Gene Garber (0-0).

The White Sox, snapping a four game losing streak, will return home for a two-night doubleheader against the Pilots.

Quincy Halts Foxes' Victory Streak at 7

Appleton's Lead Cut to 3½ Games

BY RON WITT
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Faced with virtual elimination as a serious first-half pennant threat, the second-place Quincy Cubs took advantage of three Appleton errors to rally from a 4-0 deficit and nip the Midwest League-leading Foxes, 5-4, at Goodland Field Monday night.

A good crowd (1,175) turned out in hopes of seeing the Foxes extend a 7-game win streak and all but wrap up the first-half championship. Among the fans were two school bus loads of youngsters from the Manitowish area.

But the Appleton rooters went home disappointed, as Quincy exploded for four runs after two outs in the fifth inning to gain a tie, then pushed across the winning marker in the sixth.

The victory brought the Cubs back within 3½ games of Appleton in the flag race. The first half of the season ends June 28.

Tonight, the Foxes play a doubleheader at Clinton.

Foxes right-hander Gary Hoskins was sailing along with a 4-run cushion until he ran into the big trouble in the fifth. Then, a pair of Appleton miscues put Cub runners on base on successive plays.

Hit Consecutive Singles
The loose fielding apparently unnerved Hoskins. He persuaded Dave Rosello to roll out on a fielder's choice for the second putout of the frame, but the consecutive singles by winning relief pitcher Ron Matney, Matt Alexander and Tom Binkowski produced four runs before Mike Lisetski lined to second.

Binkowski's hit, an infield bouncer to the right of first base, accounted for two of the markers when the Foxes' Dana Ryan slipped on wet grass after fielding the ball.

Quincy, which had touched Hoskins for only one safety before the fifth-inning outburst continued its heavy hitting in the sixth. Outfielder Le Roy Haynes was the culprit, socking a ground-rule double to left-center with one gone. Catcher Jack Mull then shot a ground ball to the left of third baseman Hugh Yancy, who couldn't come up with it, and Haynes crossed the plate.

Appleton did all of its scoring in the first four innings, notching single tallies in the first and third and two runs in the fourth.

Jim Redmon, who had three of Appleton's eight hits, rapped his fourth home run of the year off Quincy starter Gilberto Rivera with one out in the first inning. In the third, Redmon slammed a single to plate Ryan, who had previously singled and stole second.

Hits Line Triple
Greg Howell led off the Foxes' fourth with a line triple to center that eluded the Cubs' Binkowski. Joe Bown followed

Reggie Smith Powers Red Sox Win; Twins Batter California

By MIKE BRYSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Yes, Virginia, there is another Reggie in the American League; and he's making up for a little overshadowing by his namesake last weekend.

Reggie Smith slammed two homers and drove in four runs to power the Boston Red Sox from behind and to an 8-5 victory over Cleveland Monday night.

They were his third and fourth homers in three games, but the first two blasts in that string were almost unnoticed because of the AL's other Reggie—Jackson.

Smith had a homer both Saturday and Sunday in the Red Sox' gigantic weekend slugfest with Oakland, but they received scant attention because the A's Jackson cracked four homers and drove in 15 runs—including 10 in one game—during the series.

Marathon
Jackson's production, meanwhile, took a big dip Monday night as the A's split a marathon doubleheader with Kansas City. The A's won the opener 7-5 in 13 innings, then dropped the nightcap 3-2 in 12 innings.

Jackson managed only one hit—a towering 475-foot homer in the third inning of the opener—in 11 trips.

In other AL activity, Denny McLain moved to just a shade behind his 31-victory pace of last year as Detroit edged the New York Yankees 3-2; Minnesota battered California 8-2, and Chicago stopped Seattle 8-3. The other AL teams were idle.

Smith's three-run homer in the seventh gave the Red Sox a 7-5 lead. Smith, who also had a double in five trips, added an insurance run with his 12th homer in the ninth.

"I changed to a lighter bat," said Smith, in explaining his recent surge of success. "I've also made a couple of other changes, but I'll keep them to myself . . . don't want the pitchers to find out."

Other Changes
"I've also made some changes up here," he added, tapping his head.

Carl Yastrzemski staked Boston to an early lead with a two-run homer in the first inning, and Russ Gibson singled in two more in the fourth.

But Ken Harrelson smashed a solo homer for the Indians in the fourth, then doubled in another run during a four-run sixth inning before Smith went to work.

Jackie Hernandez was hit by a Jim Roland pitch with the bases loaded in the 12th, forcing in the winning run as the Royals knocked Oakland out of first place in the West Division.

Dick Green cracked a tie-breaking two-run double with

Spring-Fed Wisconsin Lakes Provide Good Environment for Trout

BY JIM HARP
Post-Crescent Outdoor Editor

Only the dip of the oars can be heard as they rhythmically swirl the water and propel the boat through the darkness.

Here and there a light from a cottage twinkles through the trees. Frogs croak along the shoreline and a whippoorwill calls his melodic tune that echoes across the lake.

Sound like the end of a perfect day as the boat glides up to dock?

It's really just the opposite. When a good many summer vacationers are settling down for the evening, the trout fisherman begins his vigil on the lake.

Wisconsin is blessed with many cold, spring-fed lakes whose waters will support a good population of trout. The trout, especially rainbow and brook trout, need cool water.

In the summer, when water temperatures climb rapidly, the Department of Natural Resources, recognizing the possibility of another outstanding fishery for the state, has been stocking these "trout" lakes with fish for a number of years.

Two Stage Lakes

Most of these bodies of water are "two stage" lakes. They have water conditions suitable to the sustaining of panfish and probably bass, and also have cold enough water in the depths for trout to survive.

These "two stage" lakes offer sanctuaries for trout in the depths where springs feed clear, cool water.

While inland lakes have not seen the rapid growth in size of planted fish such as had been experienced in Lake Michigan, they have maintained good populations of trout which have carried over through some severe winters.

Anglers have found that these lakes produce the best fishing results at night. Standard equipment consists of a lantern, with a holder designed so that the light can be hung over the side of the boat above the water; a fly rod or spinning rod combination, landing net and an ice chest.

Use Varied Baits

A variety of baits is the best advice since trout are finicky feeders. Most popular items include nightcrawlers, small minnows, Mayfly nymphs, June bugs, helpgramites and an assortment of artificials consisting of small spinners and spoons.

In the early hours of the evening most lake fishermen who are seeking trout will either troll or cast with the artificials. As darkness sets in, they will anchor the boat in a deep spot and rig up with live bait, fishing at various depths until the trout are located.

The ice chest comes in handy since fish that are taken can be iced down quickly. Warm water and weather is the enemy of the trout fancier who enjoys good food. Best advice is to clean the trout as soon as possible and put it on ice.

Hundreds of Wisconsin lakes have been stocked with trout and continue to receive additional plantings each spring and fall. A list of these lakes can be obtained from the Department of Natural Resources at Madison.

Some vacationers complain that summer nights are too warm for sleeping. Here's one way to remedy that situation and also stand a pretty good chance of coming up with a good catch of fish.

One additional bit of advice—take along an extra supply of insect repellent for your evening sojourn.

PITCHING — Nelson Briles, Cardinals, scattered 10 hits but kept Houston from scoring as St. Louis posted a 3-0 triumph.

chance to play. I know it might not be long the way Carty is hitting and with Alou due back soon. It's great to be wanted.

In San Diego I wasn't playing at all. I went into a little slump and was benched. I knew then I'd probably be traded and I couldn't have come to a better team.

Rookie Van Kelly, who went from Atlanta to San Diego in the Gonzalez deal, did the Dodgers in with a two-out, run-scoring double in the 15th, his first major league hit. Ed Spiezio and Ollie Brown homered for the Padres while Ken Boyer of the Dodgers sent the contest into overtime with a two-out pinch single in the ninth.

Alex Johnson's two-run triple, his fourth hit of the game, highlighted a three-run eighth inning that carried Cincinnati past San Francisco. Bobby Bonds and Ron Hunt omered early in the game for the Giants, who made it close with two in the ninth.

Rookie Homers

Rookie Al Oliver's two-run homer capped a three-run Pittsburgh rally in the eighth that enabled the Pirates to lick the Cubs. The Pirates took a 6-2 lead in the first but the Cubs battled back and went ahead 7-6 on Randy Hundley's two-run homer in the seventh. They scored again in the ninth before Steve Blass fanned rookie Rich Bladt with runners on second and third.

Nelson Briles spaced 10 hits and stranded 10 Montreal base-runners as the Cardinals made the most of four hits, including Vada Pinson's fourth homer and Julian Javier's third.

UW to Build Drive-In Ticket Office for Fans

MADISON (AP) — A ground-level, drive-in ticket facility for the fans who want to buy tickets for University of Wisconsin athletic events won approval Monday from the State Building Commission.

The $30,000 project is being backed by a gift from the "W" Club.

Elroy Hirsch, UW's new athletic director, had asked for the facility earlier this year, hoping to get more business by eliminating a climb of about 30 steps to the existing office in Camp Randall Stadium.

The present office is too inaccessible to the general public, he said.

"We make it an awful challenge for anyone to buy a ticket," he added.

Yarborough Wins in Michigan Stock Event

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. (AP) — The North rose from the dead Sunday on the wheels of the South's stock car heroes.

And it was a pair of sound-alike names from South Carolina who may have convinced the Yankee crowd at the Motor State 500 race Sunday that big time stock car racing will now be a popular fixture north of the Mason-Dixon line.

Paid attendance was announced as 46,328.

Cale Yarborough, an ex-farm-boy from Timmonsville, S.C., survived a grinding collision with Lee Roy Yarborough of

The 500 was the first major NASCAR race in the North.

The 29-year-old Cale covered the 250 laps in three hours, 35 minutes and 28 seconds and collected $17,625.

Second was David Pearson of Spartanburg, S.C. He won $10,100 of the total purse of $95,125, while Richard Petty of Randleman, Tenn., was third in a Ford for $5,875.

The 30-year-old Yarborough, who is the season's leading money winner after three major victories, picked up $4,100 for fourth.

NYU, Tulsa Only Unbeaten Teams in Field

NCAA Baseball Tournament Nears Its End

BY LEW FERGUSON

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The most form-shattering tournament in the 23-year history of the NCAA baseball College World Series headed toward the decisive stages today with dark-horses Tulsa and New York University the only teams remaining undefeated.

The Hurricanes, Missouri Valley Conference champions making their first tournament appearance, cooled off Texas 4-2 Monday night behind the two-hit pitching of Steve Rogers and Cliff Whitaker, who drove in four runs with a homer and single.

NYU, which is making its third tournament appearance but has never finished higher than fourth, unleashed a 12-hit attack to bury Massachusetts 9-2 in the other winners' bracket game Monday night.

The two unbeaten teams collide at 8 p.m. today, with the winner then sitting back to await the team that emerges from the losers' bracket.

Two more teams were to be eliminated today.

Another Shocker

Mississippi, which provided another shocker Monday when it ousted top-ranked Southern Illinois University 8-1, took on Texas while Massachusetts played Arizona State in losers' games today which would sideline two more and reduce the field to four clubs.

"We came here to do a job, but we're a long way from having it done," Tulsa Coach Gene Shell said. "We've got to win the next one to consider ourselves as being in any favored position, and then I'm not so sure."

NYU, the top scoring team in the tournament with 16 runs on 20 hits in two games, has not surprised its coach, Larry Geraci.

"We've always been a good hitting team," he said. "I wish our pitching were a little tougher. When we got to Omaha, nobody knew we were here. I think they do now."

Tulsa is expected to pitch Pat Carlton, 5-1, while NYU's probable is Neil Davis, 4-1, in tonight's pivotal game.

Tulsa's Steve Rogers had a no-hitter against Texas for 7-3 innings, then lost it on Jack Miller's single to left. He got into deeper trouble in the ninth but tcher came on to strand the tying run on second.

Three Runs

Whitaker's homer got Tulsa, now 38-3, three runs in the second.

Jeff Kalish, Joe Szweczyk and Jim Cardasis each drove in two runs for NYU, while Fred Levine poked three hits for the Violets, now 21-6. Tom Collins scattered eight hits for the win. The bombardment of Southern Illinois by Ole Miss took most by surprise, since the Salukis ing.

NEW LONDON — Waupaca took an 11-2 decision from New London Monday in a Fox River Valley Legion Baseball League game played under the Hatten Park lights.

Errors, walks and mental lapses enabled Waupaca to post a lop-sided score on just six hits. New London, on the other hand, rapped 11 hits.

Waupaca's John Holly worked seven innings, striking out seven and walking three. Tim Thompson relieved with three strikeouts in the final two frames.

Bob Solberg's triple to right center field cleared the bases in the third Solberg scored on Dan Stocker's sacrifice fly.

In the seventh, Waupaca tallied six more runs on four hits, three walks and a wild pitch.

Two errors, Stocker's double and Don Peterson's single accounted for the last two runs.

Tennis Players Will Form Association

Newcombe, Laver, Ashe Are Involved In New Group

LONDON (AP) — Seven top tennis stars have served notice on the sport's ruling establishment that they have formed an international association to gain a voice in world tennis policy—notably the question of whether South Africa should play in the Davis Cup.

The development was disclosed Monday by John Newcombe of Australia, the chairman of the group, which includes reigning Wimbledon champion Rod Laver of Australia and such U.S. stars as Arthur Ashe of Richmond, Va., and Charles Pasarell of Puerto Rico.

Newcombe said the group has invited 100 other players on the world circuit to join. He told newsmen:

"We are the people who are playing the game, and up to now we have never been consulted on any major issue. We want to know how players feel about South Africa's participation in the Davis Cup and we will make our views known."

Be Banned

Sweden has filed a motion with the International Lawn Tennis Federation proposing that all South Africans be banned from tournaments because of South Africa's racial policies. Poland and Czechoslovakia refused to play South Africa in the Davis Cup this year.

Aided by two byes, South Africa reached the final of the European Zone, Section A, and will play Britain in Bristol, England, next month.

Laver, Ron Holmberg of New York and Nicky Pilic of Yugoslavia are on the temporary committee of the new association. Pasarell is the vice chairman, Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., general secretary, and Ashe, treasurer.

Newcombe said membership application forms were handed out Monday at the Queen's Club where the London Grass Courts Championship is being played.

Newcombe, Riessen, Laver and Pilic are all members of promoter-controlled professional groups.

Newcombe said the association hopes to delve into such matters as the conduct of tournaments, as well as the thorny South Africa issue.

"There are many tournaments which do not have enough umpires and linesmen," he said. "We think 95 per cent of the players would be willing to help out. If we can get this association going, we can offer our members for umpiring duty where they are needed."

Honored in Milwaukee

Zussman, Ex-Appletonian, Named to 'Wall of Fame'

John Zussman, former Appleton High School and Lawrence College (University) athletic star, will be inducted in the "Wall of Fame" at the Milwaukee Jewish Community Center Nov. 23.

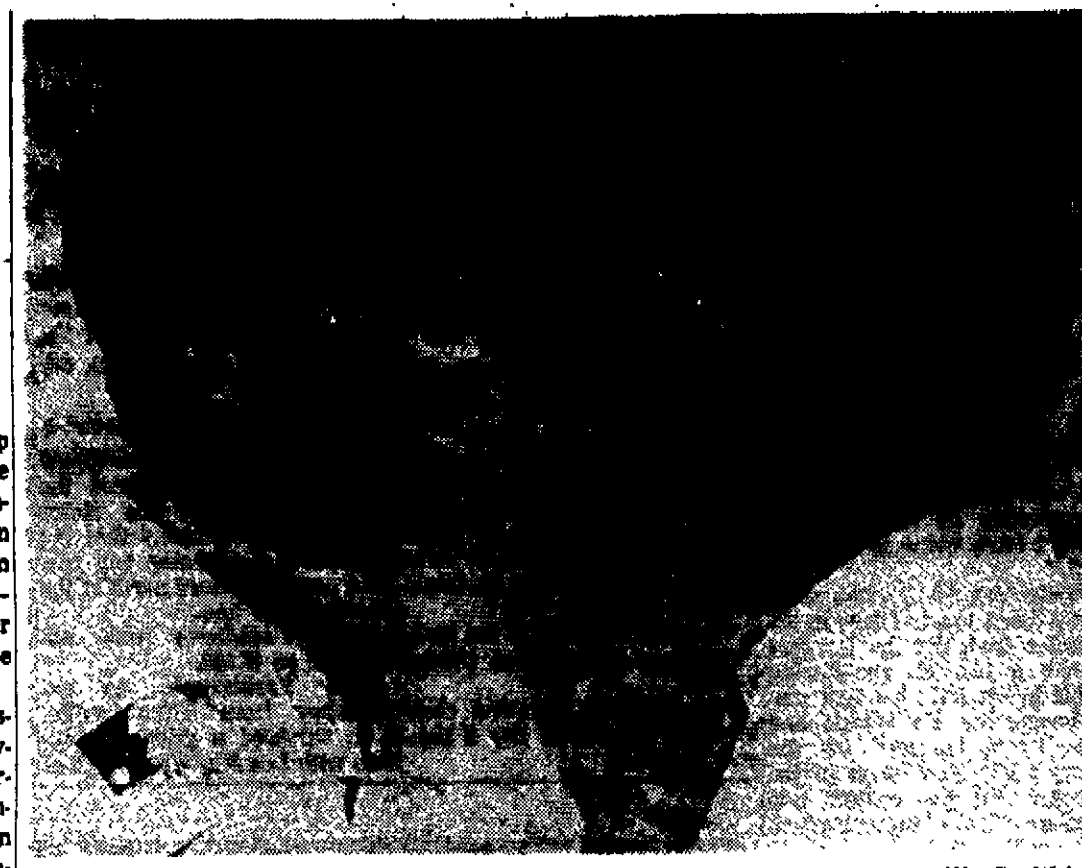

Zussman, whose father was a rabbi in Appleton, has been a member of the Milwaukee municipal recreation department for 37 years. As the department's supervisor of athletics, Zussman has been in charge of numerous youth programs and projects. He is a former president of the Wisconsin Amateur Athletic Union and has served as a Wisconsin Soccer Association commissioner for 26 years.

A 1926 graduate of Lawrence, Zussman received that school's distinguished alumni award in 1961. He captained the Vikings' Midwest Conference title-winning basketball team in 1925 and earned four letters in basketball and three in football. He won all-MC honors in both sports.

At one time, Zussman was an assistant coach at Menasha High School and coached several amateur teams in the Fox Cities area. He also played in semi-pro football and basketball loops and officiated in both sports.

The first "Wall of Fame" inductees last year were former Packer Charles (Buckets) Goldenberg, Hy Popuch, Larry Lederman and Ollie Adelman. Selections are based on an individual's athletic achievements and participation in affairs of both the general community and the Jewish community.

The Chicago 'Cubs' Gene Oliver gives umpire John Kibler the "choke" sign during an argument Sunday in Cincinnati — and was ejected from the game.

Klubbers Top Seymour Oneida's Skenadore Hurls No-Hit Game

game originally slated for last Friday has been re-set for June 20 after wet grounds forced postponement.

The Kaukauna Klubbers exploded for seven runs in the sixth inning enroute to a 12-3 victory over previously unbeaten Seymour. The 4-hit, 4-walk frame chased Vern Freemore from the mound and paved the way for a Tom Vils victory.

Vils, a southpaw, hurled a 4-hitter, walked four and struck out the same number Jim Vandenberg led the Klubbers' 15th attack with four hits in five trips. Tom Van De Hey was 3-for-4.

Joe Buss hurled the win for Nichols, while Jerry Rohm absorbed the loss for Black Creek. Bonduel scored four times in the first three frames and coasted to its win over Hofa Park behind the 5-hit pitching of John Wartman. Wartman also hit a 2-run homer, and teammate Jim Kamke rapped three hits. Jim McDermott, who yielded seven hits, took the loss.

Two home runs and the 6-hit hurling of Jim Norder paced Bear Creek's victory. Ray Yeager was charged with the setback. Dennis Stoltenow cracked a homer in a losing cause.

Weaver Lauds Orioles McNally (9-0) Claims He's Not Consistent

BY JOE MOOREHILL

CHICAGO (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles, hottest team in baseball for more than a month, have opened a 6½ game lead in the American League's East Division.

The Orioles did it by sweeping a four-game series from the Chicago White Sox with awesome power and pitching while the Boston Red Sox dropped a three-game set at Oakland.

Following a 9-0 and 13-2 doubleheader triumph over Chicago Sunday, Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver had a tougher time singling out a specific reason for the Orioles' success than Baltimore has had in winning 10 of their last 12 games and 24 of the last 30 since May 9.

There's Dave McNally with his 9-0 record on the season following a four-hit shutout in Sunday's opener. McNally has now won 11 straight counting the last two of the 1968 season and is 23-2 since last year's All-Star break.

"I'm still not consistent," moaned McNally. "The team's been getting a lot of runs for me. I pitched better last year."

Upon hearing of McNally's complaint, Weaver said, "Is that so? Well, let him just keep it up, I'll take it."

Then there's first baseman Boog Powell, who hit his 14th homer of the season in the second game and now has hit safely in his last 12 games and 30 of the last 31.

"He got off to a slow start," said Weaver, "but right now he's tremendous."

What about Paul Blair, who drove out homers in each game and drove in six runs for the day? Blair now has 13 homers and his previous major league high was 11 in 1967.

"He had a bad ankle last year and while playing on it he developed bad habits," said Weaver. "He's straightened out now. He'll be okay."

Yesterday's Stars

BATTING — Reggie Smith, Red Sox, belted a rally-starting double and his 11th and 12th home runs, driving in four runs in Boston's 8-5 victory over Cleveland.

Blair also has a current streak of hitting safely in the last 14 games.

Frank Robinson? "Robby started out fast and is still going great guns. He deserved the rest of the second game."

What about Brooks Robinson, who hit two homers in the second game?

"Brooks has had some troubles at the plate but I think he's coming out of it now," nodded Weaver.

And then there's shortstop Mark Belanger, who collected four hits in the second game and has hit safely in the last nine outings.

"People got the wrong idea about Mark," said Weaver. "He hit well in the minors but when he came up here he had to sit on the bench because we had to play Luis Aparicio."

With Aparicio gone last season, Mark had to start all over again and it was a struggle. But now he's got it going."

And what about the rest of the bench?

"Well, we have to get the rust off of them sometime," said Weaver. "That's the only way to keep a club sharp. I guess everybody just wants to get in on the act."

SPORT FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By John Behnke

What was the craziest play that ever happened in big league baseball? ...

Well how about this one ...

It happened in 1959 ...

Stan Musial was at bat against the Cubs ...

and rolled to the screen ...

Musial ran to first, then rounded first and started for second ...

Alvin Dark, Cub third baseman, ran in to get the ball, picked it up and threw to second ...

Meanwhile, umpire Vic Delmore had given a new ball to the pitcher ...

He threw THAT ball to second the same time Dark threw the other ball ...

One ball sailed into centerfield and, upon seeing that, Musial got up and started to run to third ...

But shortstop Ernie Banks caught the other ball and tagged Musial out ...

After much arguing the ump's ruled Musial out ...

That's the only time a play like that ever happened.

Ever wonder who played the most games at each position in big league history — in other words, of all ball players who ever lived, who played the most total games in the majors at first base, who at second, who at shortstop and so on ...

Here are the answers: First base, Jake Beckley ...

Second base, Eddie Collins ...

Shortstop, Luke Appling ...

Third Base, Eddie Mathews ...

Outfield, Ty Cobb ...

Catcher, Al Lopez ...

And pitcher, Hoyt Wilhelm.

I bet you didn't know ...

We got 'em, permanent-press pants in all the bright, new summer colors.

McLain Hurts 10th Victory; Chisox Win

two out in the 12th, then scored on an error for the A's triumph in the opener.

Ironically, Hernandez' RBI double produced a 10th inning 2-3 tie in the nightcap after Oakland's Sal Bando hit a solo blast in the top of the inning.

Two Homers
Bob Oliver had two homers for the Royals, one in each game. Green also homered in the second game.

McLain, hospitalized last week with a stomach virus, came back with a six-hitter for his 10th victory of the season, tops in the AL.

It also was the 100th career victory for the 25-year-old McLain, making him the youngest active hurler to reach that plateau.

The sturdy right-hander, who has five defeats, is now only a few days off his 31-game victory pace of last season. A year ago Monday night, McLain beat Chicago 6-1 for an 11-2 record.

However, that triumph came in the Tigers' 63rd game of the season. They have played only 55 so far this campaign.

But McLain isn't overly optimistic about equalling last year's feat. "It could happen, but it's highly improbable," he said. "I don't think anybody's going to win 30 this year. But I guess it's not impossible."

2-Run Homer
Al Kaline backed McLain with a two-run homer in the fourth, and the Tigers scored another run in the fifth when Don West singled and scored all the way from first when center fielder Jim Little bobbled a shoestring catch on McLain's fly ball single.

Rod Carew stole home for a record-tying sixth time this season to help the Twins past California and into sole possession of the West Division lead, a half-game ahead of Oakland.

Carew, who made his thefts of home six-for-six in the first inning, matched the league record set by Ty Cobb in 1915 and tied in 1917 by Bob Roth of Cleveland. Carew is just one shy of the major league record established by Brooklyn's Pete Reiser in 1946.

Harmon Killebrew hit his 16th homer, in addition to an RBI single, for the Twins.

Billy Wynne, recalled only a week ago from Tucson of the Pacific Coast League, scattered eight hits for his first major league victory as the White Sox snapped a four-game losing streak.

It was the fifth victory in five games for the Sox at Milwaukee. They won only one of nine there last season.

Gail Hopkins paced Chicago with a pair of RBI doubles—one touching off a three-run rally in the first, the other starting a five-run spree in the third.

Ford Captures 4th Consecutive Le Mans Victory

Ickx, Oliver Drive To Close Triumph Over Porsche Team

LE MANS, France (AP)—A Ford GT-40 called "The Old Lady" by its drivers because it won the Le Mans 24-hour endurance race last year, had the speed to do it again Sunday and beat out a field of faster but more fragile Porsches. One driver was killed.

It was the fourth straight Ford victory at Le Mans and one of the closest finishes in the history of the classic sports car event. Drivers Jackie Ickx of Belgium and Jackie Oliver of Britain just had enough to hold off a screaming Porsche to win by 115 yards.

Dedicate Win
Ickx, behind the wheel at the finish ahead of the Porsche 908 of Germany's Hans Herrmann and France's Gerard Larousse, dedicated the victory to the memory of driver Lucien Bianchi, who was killed on the Le Mans circuit in practice in April.

Ickx followed the 17-car Porsche group for three minutes, then found himself driving through the debris of one of the top Porsches in which John Wolff, 37, of Britain, had died.

The wreck also set fire to New Zealander Chris Amon's Ferrari.

Phillips Calls Home Steal 'A Showboating Stunt'

By PAT THOMPSON
ST. PAUL, MINN. (AP)—Lefty Phillips' manager of the California Angels, called Rod Carew's American League record-tying steal of home for the Minnesota Twins "a showboating stunt."

Phillips lashed out at Carew's first-inning steal that helped the Twins to an 8-2 victory over the Angels Monday night.

"Minnesota better get some insurance with that showboat in there," Phillips said. "Carew was successful this time. But stunts like that might cost this club the pennant."

Carew stole home off 23-year-old pitcher Tom Murphy with nobody out, one other runner aboard and power hitter Harmon Killebrew at bat.

"Sure he stole home," said Phillips. "But off a young pitcher. He won't do that against some of these older pitchers. He got away with it in the first inning and one of the great home run hitters in the game batting."

Manager Billy Martin also indicated displeasure at the no-out steal, and said Carew stole third and home in the inning on his own.

"I didn't call it," said Martin. "There's no exception with no outs, but he got it for himself. I've spoken to him about it. He's got the green light anytime he wants now."

Martin reportedly had put Carew on his own when running Marty Morrison on a fielder's choice and pinch-hitter Edito Artega on a fly to right to end the game.

Gideon was the third pitcher of the inning for the Cubs and the fourth of the game. Another out, however, southpaw Dennis Gideon then came on to retire

Consult With Experts If Going Into Stamps

BY SYLVIA PORTER

You are aware that the value of well chosen stamps are now rising as much as 20-30 per cent a year. You're appalled by the fact that recently the shrinkage in the buying power of your dollar has more than wiped out the interest you have earned on your bank savings and U.S. bonds.

How can you, the amateur,

Porter

Intelligently invest a portion of your capital in stamps to protect your savings against inflation and probably to make substantial profits too?

Here, from an interview with Bernard Harmer, president of New York's H.R. Harmer, Inc., this world's largest stamp auctioneer, is how:

1) Do start as a general collector, investing only small sums. Then develop a specialty — such as stamps of one type (e.g., airmail stamps or engraved stamps), from a particular country or region, or from a particular era. Study as much reliable literature as possible and attend as many auctions in your area as you can.

Stamp Packets

2) Don't waste your money on cheap packets of stamps. The odds that you'll find a valuable one are virtually nil because these packets are put together by experts who almost surely have snagged any valuable stamps before they get into the packet. The wholesale price of a typical collection of 5,000 stamps is only $12.50.

3) Don't buy up whole sheets of ordinary new stamps from this or that country — where a currency devaluation could slash their value. This goes for the U.S. too: The value of post-1943 U.S. stamps as collectors' items has remained at or below their face value and their sole use is as postage.

4) Do stick to the higher price specimens and avoid the typical 50 per cent retail markup on inexpensive examples. The big increases in values are taking place today in this high price category — particularly, 19th century stamps and early airmail stamps.

5) Do, if you find an old stamp collection in the attic and want to sell it, take it (or a representative sample) to two or three reputable stamp dealers and - or auctioneers. Ask each how much he considers the whole collection to be worth. If the stamps are attached to the original letters, don't remove

Nooyen Elected YGOP Chairman

Jeff Nooyen, 1109 E. Jardin St., recently was elected chairman of the Outagamie County Young Republicans (YGOP) for 1968-1970.

The newly elected vice-chairman is John Tilley, 309 N. Catherine St.; Mike Smith, 1100 E. Grant St., is secretary and John Brewer, 2625 N. Union St., is the treasurer.

Future plans include selling tickets for U.S. Sen Barry Goldwater's speech in Milwaukee, June 26, and a car wash in early July.

Two Self-Service Gasoline Stations Planned in Appleton

Self-service is moving outdoors in Appleton.

Super-Go Markets, Inc., Troutwood, Ohio, plans to construct two self-service gasoline facilities on the city's south and west sides.

Building permits have been issued for construction of one gas self-service outlet on the property at 319 E. Calumet Street.

The project calls for the installation of two 6,000 gallon underground gasoline tanks, along with construction of an estimated $8,000 in pump and other street-level facilities.

An identical self-service gasoline outlet will be built and put into operation soon at 1358 W. Prospect Avenue.

Those Were the Days!

Richest Kid Was One With Most Marbles

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Memory is like a musical instrument of the mind.

In its repertoire are tunes both sad and merry. They evoke the bygone days that haunt every human heart—the days that made us happy, the days of loss that gave us a sore wisdom.

Unlike most musical instruments, the memory cannot be kept locked in a case or stored away in a closet. It has a will of its own. It will creep into our consciousness at times, whether we will it or not, and choose the tune it plays—no matter what other selection we might prefer to hear.

But the music memory plays is the life of the soul, and when that music can be heard no more the soul is dead.

Your own repertoire of memories is pretty extensive if you can look back and remember when—

Panty Raids

About the wildest things college boys did was to stage dormitory panty raids on spring nights when the moon was full.

The richest kid in grammar school was the one who had the most marbles or the biggest collection of cigar bands.

The Navy could build a battleship for what it now takes to build, sink, and refloat a submarine.

You could be the life of any party if you could pluck a mandolin passably well.

Boys wore their hair cut so short that you could tell at a glance whether they had washed behind their ears that morning. And if a child fibbed to its parents it immediately had its mouth washed out with soap.

The only time families ate in the back yard was when they had a big reunion and there simply were too many for them all to eat in the house.

Symbols of Authority

The two biggest symbols of authority in the land were the U.S. Supreme Court and the nightstick carried by every policeman on his beat.

A small lad could earn his week's spending money by hanging around the front porch swing where his big sister was being courted by her beau. If the suitor was cheap, he gave the kid a dime to go away; if he was a real sport, he sprang for a quarter bribe.

A family was reckoned pretty prosperous if it had an icebox in the kitchen so big it took a four-bit chunk of ice a day instead of a two-bit one.

Margarine was colorless but it came in a package containing an amber dye, and if mother wanted it to look like real butter, she had to break the dye capsule and knead it into the margarine herself.

The streets of America had more chewing tobacco stains on them than discarded chewing gum wads.

An Irish family's standing in the community was measured to a great extent by the quality of refreshments it served during a wake.

Most children were born at home instead of in hospitals, as birth was regarded as a natural event—not a form of illness.

A son knew he had reached manhood when his father bought him a gold watch and a straight-edge razor.

A wise wife never interrupted her husband when he was discussing baseball or politics, subject about which he was expected to know nothing. When entertaining company, however, she felt free to comment on the weather and the scandalous price of groceries.

A spendthrift was a guy who threw away a broken shoelace instead of knotting it and continuing to use it.

Before undertaking a trip of more than 30 miles in the family car, you always stuck a measuring stick in the tank to be sure you had enough gas to make such a journey.

Those were the days! Remember?

them, or you may slash their value to virtually nothing. A stamp professional may legitimately charge you for an assessment of your collection. If you do not end up selling it to him. Typically an auctioneer will charge you a commission of 20 per cent of the sale price of the collection for auctioning it, less if the collection is very valuable. To make sure a stamp dealer is reputable (and quite a few aren't), check names with the American Stamp Dealers Assn. in New York City or one of its chapters in other big cities.

Try An Expert

6) Do, if you know nothing about stamps but still want to invest for profit, employ a knowledgeable dealer or other expert to advise you, to buy stamps for you at auction, or simply to sell you stamps he deems investment-worthy. Such agents today are representing increasing numbers of investors; their fees generally run about 5-10 per cent of the cost price of stamps bought. Serious collectors and top stamp auctioneers can steer you to advisors.

7) Do beware of any bargain priced stamp "gem" with, say, a high value based on a printing error. Such errors — in margins, lettering, design, watermarks, perforations, etc. — can be manufactured by a "stamp doctor" for the sole purpose of fleecing the unwary. On such apparent bargains, get advice from a reputable dealer, a trusted expert friend, or a reputable committee of stamp experts (usually part of the large philatelic societies) which will issue certificates of stamp authenticity.

In the words of Milton Ozaki, a Colorado stamp broker who is author of the recently published "How to Play the Stamp Market":

"The stamp market is... an exciting investment frontier, very similar to the commodity markets of 30 years ago." (Copyright, 1968)

Crime Agencies Omit Those Most Interested

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of the poor or minority groups are conspicuously absent from state planning agencies created under the $48 million Safe Streets Act, an independent study maintains.

So are private businesses, nonprofit organizations and officials of welfare, health and manpower agencies whose concerns relate closely to crime, said the study released Monday by the Urban Coalition and Urban America Inc.

Professionals in Charge
"Those interests must be included in the plans to serve the needs of the society at large," said the study, entitled "Law and Disorder," which was based on a survey of planning in 12 of the 50 states participating under the year-old act.

"The process is being dominated to a considerable extent by professionals from law enforcement, the courts and corrections, creating the danger that the plans will reflect only their internal needs without putting them in the broader context of the criminal justice system and its role in an urban society," the report said.

The act, which is just now entering into the action phase after months of planning, is also handicapped, the report said, by fragmented objectives, a regional approach that waters down the impact on crime-ridden urban areas, and a lack of expertise.

"Grant money is now available," the report said. "However, most states have had little or no experience planning for reform of the criminal justice system and lack the expertise to spend the money effectively."

Focus on Procedures
"Justice Department guidance to date has focused mainly on procedures and technical requirements... but there is a conspicuous absence of guidance on planning or programs." As a result, the report said, some states have turned to outside consultants, including the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

The report said consultants can be valuable, but warned that if used "in place of local participation, the Safe Streets Act's objective of stimulating local and state involvement in planning for reform will be subverted."

A spokesman for the Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which oversees the act, said action grants totaling about $4 million have been awarded to the Virgin Islands and Arizona, California, Pennsylvania, Colorado, New Mexico, Maine and Washington.

States Included
California and Pennsylvania were included in the joint study as well as Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, and Texas. Congress appropriated $19 million for state planning under the program and another $29 million for action grants this year. Action funds are expected to rise to $200 million in fiscal 1970.

The states' role in the program came under attack earlier from another urban-oriented organization—the National League of Cities.

The league said the program was dissipating planning funds without regard to need and financing an additional level of bureaucracy.

U. S. Tourist Killed in Israel

Mission Teacher Going Swimming When Firing Started

TEL AVIV (AP) — Iraqi artillery shells killed an American woman tourist and wounded another on the Israeli-Jordanian border today, the Israeli army said.

The dead American was identified as Shirley Anderson, 25, New York City. Her friend, Eileen Bonnet, 27, Lodi, Calif., suffered an injury to her left arm and underwent an operation in Jerusalem Hospital where she is reported recovering favorably.

The women—reported to be mission teachers returning home after two years in the Congo—had traveled by taxi from Jerusalem to Kallia on the northern shores of the Biblical Dead Sea when the firing began.

"We had just arrived and were about to change to go swimming when the shells started falling," Miss Bonnet said.

Ahmed Ata Abdul Karim, the Arab taxi-driver who drove the girls, to the spot, said they dived under some parked cabs.

"The shells came without warning. Then they kept on coming. Every time the shells hit we hid under the taxis."

He said four cars were damaged in the firing which went on for about 30 minutes.

The Israeli army said firing started from the Jordanian side of the border and was returned by Israeli guns.

A duel ensued in which one Israeli civilian working with the army was wounded.

Israeli army helicopters moved in and evacuated Miss Bonnet and other survivors. Miss Bonnet was the first foreign tourist fatality since the six-day war on June 1967.

The report noted the league's criticism and cited as an example Indiana which it said failed to include a representative of the Gary city government among Lake County's delegates to the state planning agency.

"The city's administration was omitted despite the fact that Gary has one of the state's highest over-all crime rates," the report said.

Party Congress

Communists Adjourn With Call to Fight Imperialism

MOSCOW (AP) — The international Communist conference held in the Kremlin since June 5 ended today with official acceptance of a call for Communist unity against imperialism.

An announcement did not disclose how many of the 75 parties attending the meeting had signed a 42-page final document.

It said the parties of Australia, Italy, San Marino and the French island Reunion had expressed full support for only that section of the document dealing with the struggle against imperialism. They withheld support for other sections analyzing the problems of communism and the world.

It also said the party of the Dominican Republic, which complained during the conference that the document was not revolutionary enough, had declined to sign.

The final conference communiqué also announced that a 13-party commission to prepare for a world anti-imperialist congress had been set up and invited all parties, including those that did not attend the present conference, to take part.

Servicemen To be Moved To Islands

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 16,000 soldiers and Marines being withdrawn from Vietnam will be redeployed to Okinawa, Hawaii and Japan, the Pentagon announced today.

Another 8,000 soldiers, including 2,000 mobilized National Guardsmen and reservists, will be returned to the United States to be disbanded and 1,200 Navy men will be distributed throughout the Pacific Command and the United States.

The Pentagon said the 8,000 man 9th Marine Regimental Landing Team will move to Okinawa, the 7,400-man 1st Brigade of the 9th Infantry Division and the division headquarters will go to Hawaii, and a Marine fighter squadron of about 400 men will be sent to Iwakuni, Japan, in July and August.

The new announcement completed details of the 25,000-man troop withdrawal announced by President Nixon at Midway 10 days ago.

When and where this congress might be held was not disclosed. The official conference spokesman was repeatedly asked how many parties had signed the main document and each time he refused to give a figure.

He said two observer delegations from Cuba and Sweden did not sign and that the parties of Great Britain and Norway had declined to sign until they have a chance to discuss the matter with their parties back home.

With Reservations
He did not clarify whether the expression of support for part of the document by the Italian, Australian and other parties constituted a signing of the document or not.

He also indicated that some additional parties signed with reservations by saying the announcement did not exclude this.

Earlier unofficial Communist sources had reported that eight parties signed with various reservations.

But the majority of delegations signed the document fully and acclaimed the conference a success, they said. The Soviet Communist Party had tried for five years to convene the conference, and the original idea was to bring the Red Chinese into line or read them out of the Communist movement.

Resistance to such drastic plans prevented any quick results from the first call for a meeting in 1964. Only after the Soviet Union dropped China from the agenda and came up with a relatively mild, catch-all document could it find wide agreement for a conference.

China refused to attend. North Korea, North Vietnam, Japan, Holland, Albania and Yugoslavia also stayed away.

Air Protects Drivers

DETROIT (AP) — A Detroit firm has developed a new auto safety device, an air bag that inflates almost instantaneously when vehicle is in a front-end collision.

The inflated bag presses the riders into their seats, preventing them from being thrown against the dashboard or other portion of the car interior.

The first generation device is intended only to protect passengers during head-on collisions, but the developer says more sophisticated devices could be built to protect passengers in cars hit from the side or rear.

The developer said the device works this way:

Bags on the dashboard are released by a sensor placed on the passenger side of the firewall between the engine and the passenger compartment.

The sensor reacts to the quick deceleration of a crash by flying forward—the same way a rider does—connecting an electric circuit which releases compressed nitrogen gas and inflates bags in about one-fifth of a second.

Each bag has two four-inch holes, allowing the bag to deflate moments after it is inflated so passengers will not be pinned in the car.

Return to Price Controls Advised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man who called the shots when price ceilings were last clamped on the nation thinks it is time for the government to try controls again—but voluntary, this time.

Michael V. DiSalle, Korean War price boss, suggested the Nixon administration might try for hold-the-line agreements with the 500 biggest corporations, or with major industries.

That would mean abandonment of the administration's policy stand against price-wage controls or guidelines, DiSalle said in an interview, but he added:

"The administration doesn't have many options left now."

Inflation Accelerating
"If they keep putting it off, this inflation is just going to keep on accelerating."

DiSalle, former Democratic governor of Ohio and mayor of Toledo, directed the Office of Price Stabilization from 1950 to 1952 and in the latter year administered wage curbs also, a director of economic stabilization.

"I didn't think the 10 per cent surtax would do anything to slow things down, and it hasn't," said DiSalle, now practicing law in Washington.

"I do think some kind of quasi-voluntary system might work."

Economy Expanding
The economy was still expanding on the strength of consumer demand pent up during World War II. Price ceilings had been removed—probably prematurely, in DiSalle's opinion—and businessmen, fully expecting that ceilings would be restored, were marking up price tags to be in an advantageous position when the anticipated "freeze" came.

Prices climbed 8 per cent in the six-month period of military escalation preceding the clampdown in January 1951, even though some indirect controls were still in effect.

"Credit restraints were in use, rent controls still prevailed, and the excess profits tax was still in force," DiSalle said. "Yet none of these seemed to slow up the spiral."

Similar Situation
The situation is similar now, the lawyer said, with the surtax having no more dampening effect than the old excess profits tax, and with businesses borrowing hand over fist in spite of record high interest rates.

Tightening the money screws brings inequitable effects, with hardships on small firms, on marginal businesses that need loans to expand, and on housing, DiSalle said.

And a wrench violent enough to cause a rapid deflation causes shutdowns and unemployment "which hurts those whom you want most to protect"—the poor, the slum dwelling the ceilings.

DiSalle

As an alternative approach, he said, the government might seek voluntary support of, say, the 500 leading companies regardless of industry, whose pricing policies have substantial influence on the markets.

DiSalle recalled that in the period of OPS ceilings, some smaller companies asked and obtained price ceiling increases, but then found they couldn't make the markups stick. Customers turned to the bigger companies which were observing the ceilings.

'Urgent Need'

Both Parties Vow Support of Surtax

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan said today President Nixon has received firm assurances of both Democratic and Republican chiefs in the House—and he believes in the Senate—that they will go all out to get an extension of the income surtax.

Ford, with Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, backing him up, said at the White House that it would be catastrophic at home and abroad if the tax bill were not approved. And, he said that Nixon feels there should be no compromise on a three-prong measure to extend the 10 per cent surtax for six months to January 1 and 5 per cent for the next six months, phase out a 7 per cent investment credit, and remove millions of poor people from the income tax rolls.

But there are indications that some Democrats in the House Ways and Means Committee are balking at a surtax extension beyond six months.

House Approval
Asked whether Nixon was assured that he could get his tax program through, Ford didn't go quite that far. He said if the House committee approves the bill it will go through the House itself. And he said in that event the House could act on the bill in time to get it to the Senate for action before June 30.

The tax issue was uppermost at a weekly meeting of the President and Republican leaders of the House and Senate which ran on nearly two hours.

Dirksen said there was some discussion also of a supplementary appropriation bill before the Senate and some speculation that an amendment might be offered to withhold funds from the controversial antiballistic missile system.

Peace Corps
Dirksen said there also is a possibility of an amendment to increase the spending authorization for the Peace Corps by $55 million.

Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and the lower-skilled workers.

The idea of industry-wide hold-the-line agreements was tried briefly in the Korean War. A steel pact was made which worked, DiSalle recalled, but the idea fell apart when it proved impossible to bring the auto industry into agreement. It might work this time, DiSalle suggested.

As an alternative approach, he said, the government might seek voluntary support of, say, the 500 leading companies regardless of industry, whose pricing policies have substantial influence on the markets.

DiSalle recalled that in the period of OPS ceilings, some smaller companies asked and obtained price ceiling increases, but then found they couldn't make the markups stick. Customers turned to the bigger companies which were observing the ceilings.

was present at the White House session, Ford said, and figured in a discussion of a proposed extension of the voting rights law, for a minimum of three years and possibly five years.

Doubts that the House would pass a surtax extension longer than six months are apparently holding up Ways and Means action, on Nixon's anti-inflation package.

Rockefeller In Brasilia

Some Cheers, No Violence Greet Envoy in Brazil

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller meets with Brazil's armed forces commanders and leaders of the suspended congress today before flying to Rio de Janeiro, the next stop on his fact-finding mission for President Nixon.

Few residents of this backwoods capital turned out Monday to greet Rockefeller and few of them cheered, but there were no violent anti-U.S. demonstrations like those that marked his previous Latin-American visits.

The only incident occurred Monday night as the New York governor conferred with President Arthur da Costa e Silva. Witnesses said four young men drove past the hotel housing the Rockefeller mission and shouted: "We'll kill the son of a bitch!" Police caught one of the men.

University Closed
There were unverified reports authorities had jailed about 300 potential troublemakers, mostly students before Rockefeller arrived. The university was closed.

Da Costa e Silva and Rockefeller were reported to have talked about Brazil's needs and problems and the objectives of the military-backed regime "in a frank and warm discussion" in Spanish, Portuguese and English.

The Brazilian president was said to have stressed the same points other Latin-American leaders made to Rockefeller—the need for increased aid and liberalized U.S. trade policies so Latin America can sell more in the U.S. market.

Da Costa e Silva also reportedly asked for a more sympathetic view of the repressive measures he says have been necessary to insure his country's political stability. The measures included an indefinite suspension of the congress.

COG Director Acknowledges City's Bus Problem Request

The executive director of the Fox Valley Council of Governments (COG) wants to meet with the Appleton Board of Public Works on the area bus service problem.

Mayor George Buckley said he received a letter Monday from Eugene Franchett, COG director, acknowledging the city's recent request for a bus service study.

Buckley wrote COG last week and said the problem of the Fox River Bus Lines, with regard to its operations and request for a $30,000 a year subsidy from the city, was an area one and should involve other communities served by the line.

The mayor said the board of public works recently authorized him to ask COG to study the bus service problem and come up with recommendations.

Best Approach
Franchett told Buckley Monday the transportation study which COG initiated earlier in the year will be concerned with all modes of transportation including bus facilities and services.

"However, the study and plan development will be between two or three years," Franchett said.

He suggested perhaps the best approach would be for him to appear before the board of public works "to get an insight to the board's perspective of the problem and specific request intended."

Buckley said he would be happy to have a COG representative appear at the next meeting but added there was no question as to what the city had requested.

"We want COG to take a look at the area Fox River Bus Line serves and point out the problem areas, along with making overall recommendations," Buckley said.

Buckley repeated what the board said previously — that the bus service problem was area in scope because nearby communities are being served.

City officials are taking the position that if a subsidy must be paid for the bus line, then the cost should be shared by all communities getting service from Fox River Lines.

Indians Aware Of Prejudice But Ignore It

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The American Indian is aware of racial prejudice, but would prefer to ignore it, a spokesman for Wisconsin Indians said Sunday during a televised panel discussion.

Wayne H. Martin, a Menominee, was asked to comment on the Indians' opinion of civil rights, and replied: "We cope with it in our own way."

He added, however: "I'm never let to forget that I'm an Indian."

Lawrence Jacobs, a Stockbridge Indian and president of United Indians of Milwaukee, said the average Indian doesn't always fit into the civil rights issue, and that his organization "would just as soon ignore it."

"Prejudice is where you look for it," said Mrs. Marilyn Skendore, a Chippewa from Minnesota. Adults, she added, "learn to live with it. But it is hard for the children."

The Menominee, Martin said, have had difficulty with self-government since their northern Wisconsin reservation became a county in 1961.

Arms Talk Start May be Possible By Late Summer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long awaited arms limitation talks between the United States and the Soviet Union could be under way by late summer, according to Nixon administration sources.

The National Security Council is expected to meet this week to review U.S. preparations for the parity which has been called SALT, for Strategic Arms Limitation Talks.

If President Nixon decides to proceed, sources say, he will order consultations with U.S. allies and contacts with the Russians as to where and when to begin the discussions.

Informants mention late July or August as probable starting dates.

Newsweek magazine said Sunday that a date as early as July 31 was given Soviet Ambassador Antoly Dobrynin in a meeting last Wednesday with Secretary of State William P. Rogers.

The magazine said Dobrynin was visibly pleased and characterized Rogers' announcement as "good news to take home."

Keuler Says Contractor's Claim Too High

Payment for Sewer Work Should be $1,170, Official Says

The claim by an Appleton sewer and excavating contractor that the city owes him $9,450 for extra work performed on projects in 1967 and 1968 should be reduced to $1,170, it was recommended Monday.

Public Works Director Frank Keuler, in a June 13 letter to the mayor and board of public works, said his department disagrees with the claim presented earlier in the year by McHugh Sewer and Excavating Contractors.

Keuler, who has signed to accept employment with a Minneapolis-based firm, said it was his recommendation, after checking engineering records and meeting with engineering personnel who acted as inspectors, that the local firm was entitled to only $1,170.

Nine Laterals
The $1,170 Keuler said, is justified in that extra work involved installation of nine laterals at $130 per lateral.

He said the McHugh firm's claim of 82 laterals was excessive, adding that a great deal of the problems encountered by the firm were not of the city's doing.

He also referred to a requirement that certain forms have to be filed within a given time for extra work and credits, contending this was not done by the McHugh firm.

McHugh has claimed locations of sewer mains were incorrectly staked out by the city engineers and resulted in the extensive extra work for which the $9,450 claim was filed.

Pastor Supporting Freer Sex Ousted By Methodists

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A pastor of the United Methodist Church whose book defends freer practice of the sex act has been ousted from the ministry.

The Rev. Stephen Cree of Montrose, Iowa, wrote recently in a book called "The New Act of Sex" that "sex with dependable contraception is a morally new and different act to which Biblical prohibitions against adultery do not necessarily apply."

The official conference of the church, in a closed session last week, voted to drop Cree from the ministerial rolls.

"They are trying to paddle me publicly while avoiding publicity," said Cree, who is married and the father of five daughters ranging in age from 4 to 10.

Clintonville Council Clears Way for Hangar at Airport

Corporation Aircraft to Be Served

CLINTONVILLE — The way was cleared for the awarding of bids totaling $48,669 for construction at the Municipal Airport of a hangar having 7,200 square feet of space to house a new industry at a special meeting of the city council Monday.

The building is to be leased to three persons who plan to start a business for servicing corporate jet aircraft.

At the June 3 meeting a recommendation of the airport commission was accepted that subject to the approval and execution of a lease agreement satisfactory to both parties, the construction of the proposed hangar be awarded to the low bidder including Clintonville Lumber and Supply for general construction, $38,064; Quality Plumbing and Heating for plumbing, $2,971, and for heating and ventilating, $4,834; and Keller's Appliance Shop for electrical, $2,800.

Will Sign

Following considerable discussion, the motion was unanimously passed that if the three interested persons sign the agreement, as individuals, that the city also signs the agreement. The three persons agreed to sign as individuals.

As first proposed in the agreement read to the council by City Clerk Lloyd Eggleston, the agreement would be signed only as a corporation and not as individuals. The feeling, expressed by several of the aldermen, was that the men should sign as individuals to show their good faith in the proposed new business. Aldermen also mentioned that they felt the men should move here after their business is started.

Early Start

City Atty. Ralph Lauer advised that when the building is up and ready for occupancy, the men sign the lease as a corporation. Work is to begin within 15 days and be completed within 70 days after awarding of the contracts.

After their basic business is established, the men intend to expand their operation to include charter service, flight instruction, aircraft rentals and aircraft sales.

The agreement signed is that the trio will enter into a lease with the city for the hangar for 22 years, commencing on the day when occupancy of the premises is given at a monthly rental of $430. The rental will not be required for first 24 months. The agreement also covers other necessary points relative to the construction and occupancy of the hangar.

Waupaca Sheriff's Department

Chief Deputy Post Filled

WAUPACA — Bernard Pippkorn, 53, Waupaca County traffic patrolman, has been named as chief deputy and second in command of the sheriff's department.

He was appointed to the newly created post by the county law enforcement committee and will begin his duties on July 1. He has also been appointed undersheriff by Sheriff Loran Frazier, who began his duties on June 15. Gov. Warren P. Knowles appointed Frazier sheriff in May to fill the 18-months unexpired term of former sheriff William Mork. Mork resigned in May to enter private industry.

As chief deputy, sheriff, Pippkorn will have the same duties and responsibilities as an undersheriff, but he will continue in the office until retirement, serving future elected sheriffs.

The position was created to give continuity to the sheriff's department. The man in the post can only be dismissed by the law enforcement committee.

"We are starting out with the continued cooperation of the total department and the citizens of the county, both necessary to make this department function as it should," Sheriff Frazier said Monday. "I do not know of any county in Wisconsin which has better cooperation from the local police department than Waupaca County."

Bernard Pippkorn, left, the newly appointed undersheriff and chief deputy of Waupaca County, talks over his duties with Sheriff Loran Frazier. Frazier assumed his duties on June 15 to complete the unexpired term of former sheriff William Mork, who resigned. Pippkorn, a former county traffic patrolman, will assume his new duties on July 1. ## Jail Inmates Cause Flood In Courthouse

Outagamie County jail inmates caused a flood in County Court Branch 1 offices early Monday when they apparently intentionally plugged a floor drain.

Court personnel came to work about 8 a.m. to find water over a large portion of the floor in the main office, the court reporter's office and the courtroom.

There was extensive damage to the ceiling in the main office. It was learned the prisoners in the bullpen area of one of the jail's four-cell lockups caused the damage. Sheriff Calvin L. Spice said there were four prisoners in the lockup at the time, but none would admit causing the damage. Spice said all four men were locked back in their individual cells.

The damage apparently occurred after 7 a.m., as jailers said the drain was not plugged when breakfast was served.

The water ran through the jail floor into the court area. Court-house janitors worked several hours to clean up the water and unplug the drain. There was no damage to records in the courtroom.

Fire Chief, Assistant Resign From New London Force

NEW LONDON — The resignation, effective June 30, was submitted Monday to the police and fire commission by Robert J. (Bucky) Bewsaw, and Joseph Timar, chief and assistant chief of the New London Fire department.

Bewsaw would not give the reason for his resignation, while Timar was out of the city today and could not be contacted.

Neither had indicated any bitterness about the present operation and reason for resigning are believed to be personal.

Bewsaw said, "It has been a pleasure being chief, and serving with a great group of men. It certainly is an excellent fire department."

He added, "They have never failed to cooperate with me and have done everything asked of them."

Kenneth Meating, a police and fire commission member, said Ruben Voss, chief engineer, would become temporary head of the department until July 1 when a decision is made on a new chief.

Meating issued the following statement on behalf of the department. "We accept the resignation of Bucky Bewsaw and Joe Timar, and we wish them the best in their new positions."

The Waukesha firm under extreme conditions and submitted a bid of $178,633 for the project which will run close to $200,000 with engineering, plumbing and other costs.

The storm sewer will be placed in an area east of Mill Street and south of Douglas Street.

When ever these annexation bills have come up, I have asked for one good reason why the city has to grow and never got an answer," Conradt declared. Later, however, he tempered his remarks by saying perhaps a compromise could be worked out in the next session.

Mayor George Buckley and Finance Director David Champion attended but refrained from participating in the question period.

Conradt's 3rd District includes some of Appleton's more populated northwest side wards with an estimated 15,000 population.

Conradt, vice chairman of the assembly highway commission, was criticized for doing so.

Appleton? Conradt was asked by a member of the audience.

Conradt, Town of Bovina chairman, chairman of the Outagamie County Highway Committee and a veteran county board member, said he was not opposed to annexation on a voluntary basis as the law now states.

But he opposes bills introduced in the current session which would ease the procedure by which cities annex town areas at their borders.

"Morally Wrong"

"It's morally wrong, against the individual and unconstitutional to bring into the city against their will," Conradt declared, adding that he voted his conscience although sometimes criticized for doing so.

Appleton Lions Hear Assemblyman

Budget Compromise Dead: Conradt

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY

The death knell for the compromise state budget bill now before the Wisconsin Legislature was predicted here Monday by a controversial Outagamie County assemblyman.

"The assembly will not concur in (Bill) 95-2 brought in by Sen. Walter Hollander, R-Rosemeade," Assemblyman Ervin Conradt, R-Shiocton, told members of the Noon Lions Club at the Conway Motor Inn.

Conradt said it was likely the assembly would vote down the budget restorations approved by the senate, and the budget of both houses.

"The big question is where are we going to raise the revenue to finance the budget for the next biennium," Conradt said.

Avoid Dispute

At no time during his talk did Conradt allude to the stinging criticism he has received from Appleton officials and the Alliance of Cities, comprised of mayors and managers of the state's 20 most populated urban areas, for voting against Tarr Task Force recommendations and bills, including new annexation legislation.

However, during a question period following his talk, the three-term assemblyman said he did not think Appleton should progress at the expense of nearby towns.

"How long do you think the towns would exist without Appleton?" Conradt was asked by a member of the audience.

Conradt, Town of Bovina chairman, chairman of the Outagamie County Highway Committee and a veteran county board member, said he was not opposed to annexation on a voluntary basis as the law now states.

LU Honors Controversial Cleric

Bishop Shannon Warm, Witty

BY MALIA PENIKIS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The Most Rev. James P. Shannon, auxiliary bishop of the St. Paul-Minneapolis Diocese, is considered one of the most approachable, friendly and articulate members of the Roman Catholic hierarchy.

He is. Since his resignation from his post came to light a few weeks ago, he also happens to be one of the most controversial figures in church circles. In an interview the first since the story of his resignation broke — this fact seems lost as the man, not the prelate, starts to speak.

Bishop Shannon was in Appleton Sunday to accept an honorary degree from Lawrence University. For weeks, he immediately stated, he has avoided the press, then with a smile, added, "I guess it's time I started earning my Brownie points with you people again."

Church Controversy

By now, anyone interested in church issues is aware of the controversy swirling around the Minneapolis prelate. In a much-heralded letter to Pope Paul in September, he stated he could not concur with the birth control encyclical. With this, he became the first U.S. bishop — and probably the only one in the Catholic Church — to have done so.

Further speculations about the situation ensued as newspapers throughout the country began guessing not only whether he had resigned, but whether the resignation had been accepted.

Unable to reach him at his home parish in Minneapolis, the news media began guessing about his whereabouts in the last two weeks.

This fact he brushes away with a "I've been traveling by car from Santa Fe (where he has been teaching) so no one has been able to reach me." Again, there is a smile, which draws smiles in return from those surrounding him.

It is statements such as these that make one forget the controversy surrounding the bishop and concentrate on a witty and warm personality. All the facts about his feelings concerning issues facing the church as well as his public stand on those facing society have been made known over and over again by the press during the past two weeks. He did not hide them Sunday in talking to the press.

But it is the personality of the man that comes through. It is only after some minutes that you realize that this friendly Irishman is a controversial figure at all. In fact, it is only after a few minutes that you realize he is a prelate for the only outward sign of his high office is a bishop's ring on his right hand.

Using the old Irish trick of throwing you off your guard, the bishop comes to meet you on the lawn of Lawrence as you approach him. "You must be from the press; you have a spiral notebook — a dead giveaway," he says with a grin.

You know you have had it at that moment. And like the rest of the press throughout the country, you know he will tell you nothing, but you also know the interview will be quite an experience.

It is. He freely discusses the birth control issue, priestly celibacy, and concern for the future of the church, ending each answer with, "But you must be careful not to think of me as an answer man."

"I don't really think I am competent in these areas. I have no special Godly council

No Plans for Limiting Students; Registration Climbs 30 Per Cent

MENASHA — Fall enrollment at Fox Valley Campus "will exceed 800 without difficulty," Chancellor Edward Weidner of the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay told Fox Valley Campus trustees Monday.

Weidner said new enrollments presently are about 30 per cent higher than they were a year ago when the fall enrollment reached 725.

Capacity of the center is rated at 700, but Weidner indicated there are no plans for placing any limits on enrollment.

The record enrollment projections prompted trustees to call a special meeting the night of July 9 to discuss the enrollment and space problems at the center.

In answer to a question from Russell DeLaHunt, Kaukauna, Outagamie County trustee, as to how far the school could go above the 700 capacity without limiting enrollment, Weidner said "you can go indefinitely until you use up every chair from 7:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and on Saturday mornings."

The Green Bay chancellor noted there is a policy on limiting student enrollment. But, he said, "it seems harsh to exclude students when they can be accommodated through more intensive space use."

Have there been any complaints from the students? DeLaHunt asked, in reference to the shortage of space. Weidner said the students have complained, particularly about the lack of library and physical education facilities. The library is woefully inadequate, he added, but books cannot be added because of the lack of space.

Outdoor Physical Education

Presently there are no formal physical education facilities as such although some outdoor facilities will be built this summer. Trustees accepted a bid of $9,187 from Badger Highways, Inc., Menasha, to construct a soccer field, softball diamond, two tennis courts, track and parking lot for 70 cars north of the classroom building. The land already is owned by the center.

The leaking roof problem also was solved Monday by trustees, although not happily.

Deduct Time

The center has been plagued with leakage around the skylights and at the roof seam connecting the old and new wings of the building. Gibson Roofing Co., Oshkosh, had submitted a bill of $355 for repairing the leaks but Oliver Thomsen, Winnebago County trustee, complained about the firm's work.

Thomsen said the leaks were not fixed until the center's custodian went up on the roof and fixed it himself. He said the time involved in the custodian's work should be deducted from Gibson's bill.

This was agreed to by the trustees.

$1.3 Million King Home Center OK'd

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — A proposed $1.3 million activities building at the Grand Army Home at King won approval Monday from the state building commission.

The action came from the agency which also approved the release of $35,000 for the relocation of roads at the home for veterans and their relatives.

The activities building will provide non-medical therapy for members of the facility, said John Moses, head of the state department of veterans affairs.

Included in the building will be recreational facilities for the members. It also will house a library, museum, post office, coffee shop, home exchange, craft shop, game rooms, a meeting room and an auditorium.

The approval carried with it a hike in the authorized budget of the project from $800,000 to $1,238,750.

The lower figure had been estimated in 1964 when planning was done.

The cost of the increase will be borne by the gifts and bequests fund of the home.

Leischow Misses 2nd Consecutive No-Hitter

NEW LONDON — One hit, for the second consecutive week, stood between Frank Leischow and a no-hit game in South-Central Division Badger Amateur Baseball action Sunday.

Jerry Dernbach spoiled Leischow's latest no hit bid with a single past first base on an attempted check swing.

Leischow paced leading Symco to its fifth win by blanking Buena Vista 10-0; while Waupaca (4-2) edged Lanark in a one-hit victory; Scandinavia (4-2) nipped New London 8-7, and Weyauwega outscored Rosholt, 11-9 in a free scoring contest.

Home Run
Bob Hanson collected a circuit blow for Symco, however, the only run needed came in the first inning on a sequence of odd ball playing. Dan Steinbach singled to open the inning, was sacrificed to second on a Ken Groholski bunt, headed for third on the play and raced home when the first baseman's throw to third sailed away from any fielder. Gordon Stevenson had a 4 for 4 day including a double. Leischow fanned 20 and walked just two.

Gary Potts, Ken Tappa and Rick Riddle combined to throw a one-hitter against Lanark. George Soik's hard smash to right field in the 8th inning dashed no-hit dreams.

Terry Martin paced the Lakemen offensively with three doubles in four appearances at the plate.

Ten Errors
Ten errors killed New London's hopes of taking undisputed second place as they fell to Scandinavia 8-7. The Vikings bunched their hits with the errors as they were out hit 9-7 by the Merchants.

Three runs in the second scored on a single, error, single, walk and error. Scandy pushed home two in the seventh on a hit batter, single, error and sacrifice.

In the eighth the winners tallied two runs as New London recorded errors on four successive grounders.

New London recorded single runs in the first, and fourth and two in the seventh. In the ninth the Merchants reached on an error and recorded three singles to bring in two runs. With two men on base and two outs the Merchants were taken out of the game on an attempted steal of second base.

Sixth Loss
Weyauwega tallied three runs in the eighth to come from behind to hand Rosholt its sixth loss of the year.

Dave Koehler went the distance for the victory, while Roger Risser and Terry Bestul toiled for the losers. Terry

Tom Rohde, Dick Davidson, Ron Annunson and Jim Hartfiel each had two hits for the Braves, while Tom Grossman tripled. Gabriel Eiden, Carl Richter and Bestul collected a pair of safeties for Rosholt.

Chilton Swim Instructions Start Monday

Registration Still Open for Classes in Special Skills

CHILTON — The swim instruction program organized by the Chilton Recreation Department will begin Monday, June 23, with classes beginning swimming, advanced beginners, intermediate swimming and beginning diving being conducted.

Classes will run daily for three weeks. The second cycle of instruction will begin July 14 with two beginners' classes at 8 and 9 a.m. and an advanced beginners' class at 10 a.m. The third and final cycle start Aug. 4 with classes in beginning, intermediate and advanced swimming.

Registration so far this year totals 203. In past years, registrations have been near the 300 mark. There are still openings in all classes except cycle I beginners.

Recreation Director John Freidel said that registration may be down somewhat because of the public school's instructional program during the regular school year. This program gives children from grades three through 10 instruction one day a week for the entire school session.

Classes at school, however, are not set up at a particular skill level but include non-swimmers and competitive swimmers alike. The summer lessons last only three weeks, but are taught on particular skill levels.

Drive Begins to Raise Money for 4-H Center

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National 4-H Club Foundation announced today a drive to raise money for the national youth group's center in suburban Washington.

The foundation, a nonprofit corporation, has enlisted the aid of 112 business executives to raise money for the nation 4-H 4-H center project.

Plans include new dormitories, class rooms and a meeting center, officials said. The expansion will mean an increase in the center's capacity to 300 from 300 at present.

Howard C. Harber, Englewood Cliffs, N.J., chairman of CPC International, Inc., formerly Corn Products Co. is head of the fund drive's advisory council.

Important to America

"The national 4-H center is important to America," Harber said in a statement. "At the center, the young men and women who must make America's future decisions are learning about responsible and creative approaches to citizenship and leadership."

Clubs in all states have pledged support and plan to raise one-fourth of the money. The balance—about $6 million—is expected to be contributed by business and industry, the foundation said.

The center, which is headquarters of the foundation, was opened in 1959. More than 20,000 youths and leaders come to the 124-acre campus in Chevy Chase, Md., for meetings and seminars.

Nationally, there are about three million 4-H members and around 400,000 local leaders. The program is supervised and assisted by federal-state extension services and is available to rural and many city youths from ages 9 through 19.

Messengers to be installed are Kris Graham, New London, first; Linda Schwan, Hortonville, second; Debbie Bridges, New London, third; Janet Gretzinger, New London, fourth; and Mary Blissett, New London, fifth. Terri Lee Henschel, Marion, will be installed as senior custodian; Faye Yenchesky, Marion, junior custodian; Linda Bertram, Marion, inner guard, and Cindy Nelson, Hortonville, outer guard.

Two-Car Collision Three Seriously Hurt In U.S. 41 Accident

Four persons were injured, three of them seriously, in a grinding, two-car crash on U.S. 41, about a half mile south of State 47, about 10 a.m. Monday.

Outagamie County police identified the drivers as Odie Paulson, 76, 1703 Liberty St., Oshkosh, and Charles M. Eberdt, 21, Stevens Point.

Paulson suffered abrasions and contusions to his entire body, as did his 71-year-old wife, Mrs. Paulson's sister, Alma F. Gorges, 73, 8 Friendly St., Menasha, apparently was the most seriously injured.

Price Tag Set at $4 Million for Two-Lane Span

Plans Revealed
For Menasha Bridge Over Little Lake

OSHKOSH — Preliminary cost estimates for a two-lane Little Lake Butte des Morts bridge, 1,000 feet north of Ninth Street in Menasha to U.S. 41 may be close to $4 million, it was revealed here Monday.

The price tag was revealed at a meeting of the special Little Lake Butte des Morts bridge committee by engineering consultants hired by the county to prepare cost estimates.

W. A. Schulenberg, professional engineer, with Owen Ayres Associates, Eau Claire, told the county board committee members that because of rising construction costs over the past three years, and other inflationary factors, cost estimates would "naturally be higher."

The engineer said during discussions with other consulting firms, it was concluded there would be "no special problems" in constructing the bridge interconnection to U.S. 41.

However, a problem exists with two railroad grade crossings on the west side.

Schulenberg estimated the daily traffic count of 13,000 across the proposed bridge, adding that "I don't believe the public service commission would approve plans based on the grade crossings at the railroad tracks."

Based on a $19 per square foot cost, the engineer estimated the bridge alone would cost approximately $975,000 for 1,200 feet, including a 40 foot deck.

The engineer said the plan is designed for a 54.2 foot vertical clearance. However, it was indicated that "there's no reason to believe the county could not reduce the vertical clearance to approximately 32 to 35 feet based on the Lake Butte des Morts bridge being constructed on the super highway at Oshkosh," Schulenberg said.

Schulenberg, in quoting these estimates, advised the county to add another 10 per cent engineering costs which would bring a total of $1,100,000. With an additional $1,950,000 for temporary approaches, the cost jumps to $3 million without considering the railroad crossings.

Schulenberg recommended that the bridge be constructed above the railroad tracks and U.S. 41 with an additional structure being built which would provide a temporary loop and access point on U.S. 41 on the southbound lane.

This new structure, which would connect to the southbound lane, would cost an estimated $800,000, the engineer reported. Included in that cost would be fill materials on the west abutment of the lake bridge and east abutment of the tracks.

Supv. Roland Kampe, Town of Menasha chairman, said there would be no problem "in our

Consider Dean At Fox Valley

Chancellor Declares Selection May Be Made Within Week

MENASHA — Selection of a new dean for the Fox Valley Campus may be made by the end of this week or the first part of next week, according to Chancellor Edward W. Weidner of the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

Weidner told the campus trustees that both candidates still under consideration were still interested in the post being vacated by Dean Harry Hutson. Russell DeLaHunt, Kaukauna, Outagamie County trustee, questioned the advisability of having students involved in the selection of the new dean.

Not Unusual
Interviews of the candidates were conducted by a committee composed of faculty members, students and trustees.

Weidner said it no longer was unusual to include students on the selection committee and their participation did not involve running the university.

"The dean is in constant contact with students," the chancellor said, "and it is useful to get their viewpoint."

Many times, he added, the students bring up items in an interview which are often overlooked.

Other members of the trustees were split in their feelings on having students participate. Oliver Thomsen, a Winnebago County trustee, said he supported the idea while Herbert Helble, an Outagamie County trustee, said he was disappointed in the results.

Salary Problem
Weidner said several of the candidates commented that it was the first time they had faced an interview committee composed of other than just faculty and student members.

He also warned the trustees the biggest problem in getting either of the candidates will be salary. He said the University of Wisconsin salary scale is not high in comparison to other universities, particularly in fringe benefits.

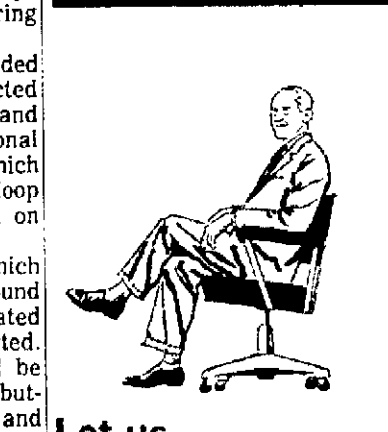

However, he added, the reputation of the university as an academic institution has quite often been enough to offset the salary disadvantage.

town of closing both rail crossings (north and south) and build a new crossing."

The engineer said the rail crossing problem would be alleviated by this additional structure. "Visualizing the 13,000 traffic count to cross the bridge, compared to the few railroad cars at these two crossings, hopefully there should be no reason why we can't get approval in closing the rail crossings on the highway," Schulenberg said.

The engineer felt confident that this two-lane bridge could be incorporated into a future interchange system. "We then could hope for both federal and state aids, which would keep this cost to the county at a minimum."

Schulenberg emphasized that cost estimates presented today were preliminary and a final report could be expected within a month.

Budget Compromise Dead, Conradt Says

General Sales Tax
During his talk, he said the only fair tax to impose to raise more revenue is a general sales tax, declaring, "Wisconsin for many years has been missing the boat in this respect."

Wisconsin has a selective 3 per cent sales tax while neighboring states have general sales taxes.

Conradt said he did not favor a 1 per cent increase in the existing selective tax because it would not raise enough funds to operate the state in the next biennium.

On a general sales tax, he would advocate exempting food and drugs, Conradt said, and have those with less than $3,000 annual income also exempt.

He defended the assembly's action of killing a proposal to boost the beer tax, citing there already is a $9 federal and $1 state, plus sales and excise taxes, on every barrel of beer in Wisconsin.

Small Breweries
"Small breweries could no longer exist if the tax were increased," Conradt said. He also cautioned that adding any more to the beer taxes might force an important segment of industry and the economy out of Wisconsin.

"We want to keep industry, rather than tax them out of the state," Conradt said. He suggested the federal government forgive $3 per barrel and turn that tax money over to the state for distribution in Wisconsin.

Conradt said he opposed raising the income taxes of the middle bracket earners.

The 3rd District lawmaker also observed that: "Hard, Fast Rules"

—The legislature already has passed some bills arising out of sit-ins and demonstrations and warned that if the University of Wisconsin Board of Regents did not take the initiative in enforcing "hard, fast rules," the state's governing body would pass still stiffer laws.

—There is a taxpayers' rebellion underway, making it more imperative to "live within our means and balance the budget."

—It is the responsibility of cities, such as Appleton, to carry on a program of education and inform the people in nearby towns of the benefits they will have by belonging to the city. This would be the only alternative to force annexation, which he strongly opposed.

Controversial Bishop Is Warm, Witty Man

on the issues. I act according to my conscience." Asked what he thought about the future of the church, the bishop answered, "Only the good Lord knows."

"The church and organized religion in general is going through a crisis. It is no longer enough to have personal piety which insulated and isolated the church from social problems."

"It is the era of examination; the voice of suffering humanity is asking what the church can do; it is the era of rising expectations."

"The mass of humanity is no longer willing to settle for perpetuation of injustice and a lot of their unwillingness is focused on the institutionalized churches."

The church, he said, is trying to find the right kinds of programs and they are latecomers in this field. Scholars, students, lawyers and government agencies have been the instigators.

A question about priestly celibacy brought the answer, "there is a dichotomy here. On the one hand there is the explicit promise by the Pope that there won't be any changes in this. On the other hand, requests for this by the priests and questions about the situation are constantly increasing."

In all but one of the retreats for priests he has conducted recently, he said, this has been the primary question. These questions and answers, however, show little of the man who has managed to get so much support from his colleagues, his fellow priests and the lay people. It is the other side of him — his informal attitude — which must have earned him a standing ovation at a convention before saying one word.

"I apologize to you gentlemen for making you move your cameras, but it would have interfered with the commencement activity and it is their day," he says to television people before the interview.

He then shows the camera-man how to hide the mike under the clerical vest so it won't show on camera. Taping it down so it won't make noises, he murmurs, "It's one of our clerical secrets."

Glancing at the white wall behind him, which has a few pictures of notes from medieval chants, he comments, "Good ecclesiastical background, I see."

Then, waiting for the camera-men to get ready, Bishop Shannon muses about the footgear on some of the graduates receiving their diplomas.

"I liked the one with his black robe and bare feet best," he says, then with a grin adds, "Sometimes these young people think they're emancipated and all they really are, are unbuttoned."

Expressions like these permeate his interview, making him into a common, friendly man. This was personified in a short conversation between two students before commencement.

"Which one is he," asked one. "I think he's the red-head," came the answer.

Dr. Nellen Regent President

In electing Dr. James Nellen of Green Bay as its new president, the University of Wisconsin Board of Regents has recognized a man with a lifelong interest in the welfare of the university as well as having made a judgment on the work he has done since his appointment as a regent in 1965.

Dr. Nellen spent his boyhood in Madison. He enrolled at the university and received his doctor of medicine degree there in 1939. During his years at the university, Dr. Nellen won two letters as a lineman on the Badger football team, perhaps a bit of history which now will help the university's objective of improving its lot on the gridiron.

During his tenure as a regent, Dr. Nellen has demonstrated a quiet capacity for getting at the heart of problems. He may be a soft-spoken member of the board, but his recommendations have come with great thought in an age when some schools are being harmed by heated exchanges which do not hold up in fact.

Northeastern Wisconsin can draw particular satisfaction from Dr. Nellen's election, not only because of his residence but because of the more important place the region now has in university affairs because of the new University of Wisconsin-Green Bay. We do not expect Dr. Nellen to play any favorites in this regard, but his voice will be an important one in a high place.

Dr. Nellen has risen to one of the highest places a citizen public servant can reach at a most difficult time for higher education, both because of fiscal problems and social turmoil on the campuses. The Post-Crescent congratulates him and wishes him well.

A Reprimand for Gen. Hershey

The federal Court of Appeals in Washington used strong language in upholding a federal district court's findings against a directive — some said it was only advice — of Selective Service Director Lewis Hershey that antiwar demonstrators should lose their draft deferments. And the strong language was in order.

"This declaration of war against antiwar protesters springs full grown from the head of Gen. Hershey, without benefit of reference to any provision of the Selective Service Act or regulations," said the Court of Appeals.

There never should have been such a court case because there never should have been such an order. If Lt. Gen. Hershey issued the directive in a bit of emotion against demonstrators — and he had plenty of company on that score — it should have been recalled once calmer thinking had returned. For the simple legal fact is, no matter how distasteful the demonstrations or no matter how strong the desire for reaction, that these activities had nothing at all to do with the basis for which draft deferments can be granted.

In its decision, the Court of Appeals underlined a point we have made before, that the Hershey directive left local draft boards in confusion as to how they were to proceed in the face of clear legal doubts over their national instructions. In fact, a Selective Service spokesman is unable to say whether any local board acted as Hershey seemed to be directing. Now, certainly, there will be some cases in the courts of draftees who claim they were called in a manner the courts say was improper.

It is important to note that the Court of Appeals ruling also rejected a plea that the delinquency provisions of the draft law are unconstitutional. Thus, local boards still can reclassify persons who break the rules of the draft itself such as failing to register or destroying draft cards.

We never have been among those who declared that all would be right in the world if Lt. Gen. Hershey were sacked from his job. He has given decades of faithful service in a position which because of its responsibilities is a lightning rod for criticism.

But the Court of Appeals decision must be viewed as a serious reprimand to Lt. Gen. Hershey. And the general has made it plain that he has his doubts about Nixon administration plans for a draft lottery and for its goal of a volunteer army. While we also have our doubts on the latter, it may be that a new Selective Service director would be a logical part of draft law reform.

Danger of Russian-Chinese War

The increase in the number of border clashes between Russians and Chinese and the widespread publicity both sides are giving to the clashes are ominous signs that irrationality might take over in both camps.

The Chinese claim that the Russians are moving toward an "imperialist policy of aggression" and that the millions of Chinese citizens must be prepared for war. Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev claims that the Chinese aim is "a great nuclear war" against the Soviet Union. Both sides insist that there have been build-ups of conventional forces along the disputed areas of the Ussuri River and there probably have. Both sides also are issuing warnings to their people of the danger of attack.

When the Chinese surprised United States officials with their unexpected progress in nuclear development, there were some suggestions that we wage a preventive war against the Chinese, at least as far as trying to destroy their nuclear capability was concerned, before it went any further. But a preventive war is simply not possible for the United States. The Russians may not have any such scruples. Furthermore they are plagued by dissent on their Western flank by nations they thought safely under Kremlin control. Russian leaders have demonstrated they are almost paranoid in their fear of encirclement.

The Chinese have agreed with a Russian proposal that they meet and try to work out a settlement for the border problems. But if no agreement can be reached and the fears and clashes continue, just about anything could happen.

Looking Backward
Appleton as a Summer Resort

100 YEARS AGO
Quoted from the Appleton Post for June 10, 1869.

Appleton, the great hydra-like city of northern Wisconsin, offers attractions to those dwellers in crowded cities who seek a few weeks of recreation amid the beauties of nature during the summer.

The city is embowered with the native foliage of our sturdy forest trees, which impart to it a rural retirement, and refreshing coolness that is particularly grateful during the warm season.

Then, there is the rushing, roaring river, dashing gaily over its rocky bed, singing its music to the verdant hills on either side. Above the Chute, the finest river boating extending to Lake Winnebago, is to be found. Those who have a desire for fishing or sailing could gratify their taste to the fullest extent.

Extended drives through the finely wooded and well cultivated districts around here could be indulged in to any extent, and neighboring villages offer pleasant resting places to excursionists.

As an inexpensive summer resort few places offer the same inducements as Appleton to that class which really seeks to escape for a season from the giddy vortex of fashion which usually assembles at the stylish watering places.

Mrs. Ruth Manske, New London, was installed as marshal of the state Rebekahs, which held its meeting in Appleton. The theme of the Rebekah State Assembly was "Victory."

The George Banta home in Menasha was the scene of the picnic meeting of Kappa Alpha Theta Alumnae. Hostesses for the summer event were Miss Martha Boyd, Appleton; Mrs. William Nash and Mrs. Peter Humlek, Menasha.

People's Forum
Why Take Student Drivers on Main Streets in Rush Hours?

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

Under the assumption that most driver training instructors are teachers and therefore educated, I am quite amazed at their practice of bringing new drivers on the main traffic arteries during rush hours (7:30-8:30 a.m., 12:00-1:00 p.m., and 4:30-5:30 p.m.).

Besides creating unnecessary traffic, the pupils drive at speeds well below that of the normal traffic flow which in itself is a potential accident source. Their actions are abrupt and uncertain and could lead to a serious accident.

So driver training instructors, why not use some common sense and stay off the main traffic arteries until the pupil has had adequate experience in city driving.

Concerned Driver

Editor's Note: The answer is obvious. Student drivers need training in driving in rush hour traffic. Many other drivers do too.

Kraft Writes
New York Primary Shows Trend For Splintering of Major Parties

NEW YORK — Thanks to the with-it culture, New York is probably more than ever "not the country." But the primary election for mayor this Tuesday offers a test of national significance.

The test is not merely of the trend to the right. The real question is whether there is not shaping up a time of minority politics—a period when a crazy variety of currents and cross-currents prevents either party from building a majority on an enduring basis.

The starting point for all one Democrat who can win a majority of the citywide vote is Robert Wagner, the moderate liberal who previously served as mayor from 1954 and 1965. And normally Wagner would have no trouble in a primary with the more conservative law-and-order candidate, controller Marion Procaccino. All polls show Mr. Procaccino with only about one-third of the primary vote.

But this year, Wagner's strength in the Democratic Party is being sapped by three Newluc candidates—novelist Norman Mailer, Bronx borough president Herman Badillo, and Congressman James Scheuer. Between them they are likely to get as much as a third of the total vote. That means a nearly perfect three-way split, and a very close contest for the nomination.

On the Republican side in New York, the threat to majority politics comes from the conservative right wing. Mayor John Lindsay is probably the only Republican alive who could come close to winning a majority in New York City. And normally, Mr. Lindsay would be a shoo-in for renomination by the Republican Party.

LAW AND ORDER

But the partisans who used to dominate New York City Republicanism have increasingly been drawn off to the Newluc wing of the Democratic Party. Their place is being taken by white ethnic groups, notably of Irish and Italian descent, who have broken with the Newluc leadership in the Democratic Party, and joined the Republicans in search of a strong stand on law and order.

Inside the city, these ethnic groups already control almost every state Assembly and Senate seat with a Republican incumbent. And this year, they this is a displacement caused by the growth of a new coalition on the left side of the Democratic party. That coalition includes the newer minority groups—Negroes and Spanish-speaking Americans—plus the highly-educated and generally well-off middle classes that have grown up with special abundance around the universities. It is ultra-liberal on social issues, notably race. It has been called (by the election expert, Richard Scammon) the Newluc (or New Left and Academic) coalition.

Wisconsin Report
Non-Partisan Election Of County Officers Is A Perennial Proposal

By JOHN WYNGAARD
MADISON — If there were a prize offered for the longevity of a legislative idea the perennial proposition for the non-partisan election of county officers would be one of the strong nominees. And if there were a booby prize offered for a regularly presented legislative idea that has little or no change or approval, the proposal for nonpartisan election of the courthouse officer slates would be a likely winner again.

About 75 per cent of the elective courthouse positions of Wisconsin are in the hands of the Republicans. No one can doubt that their cumulative campaign exertions, and their association with the campaign machinery of the party whose symbol they use as an election vehicle, the help of their friends and neighbors and relatives, are enormous boons to the ruling party of the state.

Therefore it is not surprising impetus from partisan identification of local officials who have no policy-making functions whatsoever.

PARTY ISN'T REVELANT

It is about as plausible to select a county clerk on the basis of his party identity as it is to choose a high school principal because he is a Quaker, or a Prohibitionist, or a champion of Esperanto.

When Mr. Nikolay appeared before a hearing committee the other day to make an argument for his nonpartisan county elections bill he said in effect that it is undignified and unworthy of a great political society to assume, in effect, that the nominee for president or governor or even for congressman or state senator, should cling to the coat-tails, so to speak, of the party's nominee for county treasurer or surveyor.

The remark sounded sarcastic when it was quoted in the press, as its author undoubtedly intended. Yet Mr. Nikolay knows that politics are not always logical, or neat, or sensible. The goal of the party is to win. As somebody said, a party is a conspiracy to gain control of the government, and that which works is retained and protected, including the logically indefensible idea of partisan courthouse elections.

OTHERS SEEM ILLOGICAL

Equally illogical to many minds, is the idea of electing purely ministerial officers of fairly minor function, rather than appointing them.

The Tarr Commission wrestled with that matter when it considered its mandate to write recommendations for the improvement in the structure of local government. Realistically, it decided against involving itself in the dispute about partisan versus nonpartisan elections, and considered the merits of elections.

Realistically, again, the study commission recognized that the partisan politicians would react coolly to any proposal to abolish the county election ticket altogether and turned up with a local option proposition.

BILL IN DEEP FREEZE

Let the people of each county decide for themselves, it advised, whether they want to elect all of the long list of county officials or whether an appointive system would be more efficient and sensible.

Yet the logistical considerations in party politics are such that even that modest and cautious reform has very little chance of enactment indeed, six months after it was presented, it has not yet been considered.

Wyngaard

that the Democrats tend to be the boosters of the nonpartisan county election plan. As in past sessions, for example, such a bill is now before the Assembly under the name of Assemblyman Frank Nikolay of Clark County, the assistant Democratic leader in the lower house of the legislature.

VIEW WOULD CHANGE

Skeptics may suggest with some justification that Mr. Nikolay as a loyal partisan might not be so energetically concerned with this issue if his party controlled most of the courthouse positions and have a campaign advantage over its rival of corresponding importance.

It is conceivable that under such circumstances Mr. Nikolay might be prevailed upon by party associates to mute his objections to partisan choices of sheriffs, clerks, registers, coroners, and the rest.

Yet it is perfectly apparent that the Democratic assistant leader is in earnest about his proposition, perhaps in part because he realizes what a disadvantage his own cause suffers through the extraneous circumstances that the Republican opposition gains some

Strictly Personal Saved From Measles, Now Children Starve

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS
In both the Near and Far East, measles in children often prove fatal. With the advent of the newer vaccines, we are able to reduce the percentage of children who come down with the disease, and thus cut the death rate from this cause.

When we cut the death rate, we naturally reduce the high infant mortality rate in these areas, and thus increase the population where millions of people are already starving. The children won't die from measles, but from malnutrition.

Everywhere in the world, modern medicine is performing this same dubious miracle — redeeming over-populated areas from disease, only to have the people succumb to starvation because there are more of them. It is a nice moral question whether pestilence or famine should be their fate.

This is one of the great and pressing paradoxes of "progress." The longer that science increases the life-span, the more babies we keep alive, the more babies we save through vaccines and antibiotics — the graver becomes the food situation in these under-developed areas, and the higher the possibility of mass starvation on a scale unknown in the past.

There is another pathetic paradox involved in this same situation. As long as the standard of living remains low, the birth-rate remains high; it is only when the standard of living goes up that the number of children per family goes down.

So that the less people have to eat, the more they breed, and then the even less they have to eat. And the more the people have to eat, the less they breed, so that they soon have enormous surpluses — so large in our case that the government will pay farmers not to produce certain crops, while two-thirds of the world goes to bed hungry every night.

Of course, this whole thing is not rational, it is not sensible, it is not humane — it is like a fantasy invented by some black humorist, or a satire beyond anything Swift could have imagined. Nor can we simply hand over our surplus food to starving peoples — for this would threaten the "economic balance" of world trade and upset the economics of some countries.

So here we are, increasing the world's population through science — and increasing it precisely where it should be decreased — while the mighty abstractions of "economics" and "trade" and "government" prevent any rational disposition of the world's food resources to those in most critical need of it. Little wonder that young people all over the world find us blind and paralyzed to the edge of insanity.

Many Young Adults Keep on the Move

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're in the 20-25 age group and move each year, you're not unusual. According to a recent survey by Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation, more than 45 percent of the people in this age group move each year.

Shared Revenue Nixon Objective, Mayors Reminded

Romney Tells City Executives
To Stop Squabbles With States

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Secretary George Romney of the Department of Housing and Urban Development says federal revenue sharing will become a reality only when cities stop quarreling with states over how the money should be divided.

"The Nixon administration is committed for revenue sharing," Romney told the annual meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors Monday. "If this can be shaped politically so that we can secure the approval of Congress, I think it's going to come."

"But I ought to say to you in all realism that if we are going to get revenue sharing, it's only going to come as a result of a coalition between the mayors and the governors."

"It's not going to come if the mayors and the governors can't get together, in my opinion."

The mayors want the funds to come directly to them in grants. They oppose proposals that would funnel the money through state governments, which they see as generally unsympathetic to urban needs.

Romney, at a news conference after his address to the mayors, said economist Arthur Burns, senior presidential adviser, is well along on devising a revenue sharing formula.

"In principal, the matter is approved," Romney said.

The former Michigan governor's speech drew praise later from three Democratic mayors.

Mayor Beverly C. Briley of Nashville, Tenn., president of the National League of Cities, commented:

"My opinion is that Secretary Romney is beginning to get very heavily the feel of what we as mayors have been saying for a long time. My only hope is that he is able to influence the administration and Congress."

Mayor James H.J. Tate of Philadelphia said, "I thought it was good. I hope it wasn't so much rhetoric."

Mayor Arthur Naftalin of Minneapolis said Romney "of all the members of the administration is the one who has shown the greatest feel for the problem."

First Lady's Tour

Pat Nixon Cheered Amid Protesters

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Pat Nixon received a generally warm welcome at the start of her West Coast tour and appeared not to notice three anti-war demonstrations.

She went to street gardens, classrooms and the edge of the Negro slums Monday to salute volunteer workers at the start of her initial official trip as First Lady.

There was a paper shower of protest from antiwar demonstrators at upstairs windows of a building which houses FISH, a 24-hour emergency help center.

Mrs. Nixon came to visit.

The paper slips read: "If this was napalm you would be dead."

Center Volunteers

Some of the demonstration participants, from the Portland Resistance, have been volunteers at the emergency center themselves and have their headquarters in the same 100-year-old church building.

Bob Wollheim, 20, explained. "We are fully behind FISH. Make no mistake about that. But while we are spending in Vietnam it is silly to go around encouraging volunteer efforts for the poor."

While Mrs. Nixon heard from the emergency center leaders how hundreds of volunteers help their neighbors with food, fuel and all sorts of aid, a printed banner was waved in back of the room, saying:

Japanese Abandon Sinking Fishing Craft

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Crewmen of a Japanese fishing boat abandoned their foundering vessel today and were reported paddling toward Aniwa Island in the New Hebrides in two rubber lifeboats.

Nadi airport on Fiji reported picking up distress signals from the 100-ton Senshu Ichi of Okinawa which said it was taking on water and in danger of sinking. Aircraft from the New Hebrides flew over the rafts and reported eight to 10 survivors were aboard. The rafts were accompanied by a native canoe.

Two rescue vessels were dispatched to Aniwa to pick up the crewmen.

"How many people will be fed today by your visit? How many people will still be allowed to starve? 70 million a day spent on Vietnam. Why?"

Women's Subservience

Another protest came from seven "witches" in white face makeup—members of the Women's International Terrorist Conspiracy from Hell, who think Mrs. Nixon "symbolizes the subservient role of women."

They shouted in protests of the war and lack of attention to the poor.

Applause from the volunteers drowned them out. Mrs. Nixon said afterwards she "didn't see anything" because of the crowd and television cameras.

"Any way, we got to meet all the volunteers," she said.

She came to see what the White House called "vestpockets of volunteerism" and saw four of them in Portland. She visits two more in this area this morning before flying to Los Angeles to greet volunteers there late today and Wednesday.

At "Green Fingers," where needy families have 240,000 square feet of vacant land to raise their own vegetables, Viviane Barnett, a Negro real estate dealer and leading light of the effort, said it operated "without one penny of state or federal funds."

"This program could be carried out all across the country," said Mrs. Barnett. "There's no reason for people to go hungry."

Declared Mrs. Nixon "It takes a woman to get something done."

Congressmen Angered By Supreme Court's Decision for Powell

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court's decision that Adam Clayton Powell was illegally denied his seat in the House two years ago has brought some angry comments but little indication Congress will retaliate against the high tribunal.

The main reason: Chief Justice Earl Warren, the target of conservatives because of the liberal bent taken by the court for the last 16 years, retires later this month.

His successor, Warren E. Burger, is considered by the conservatives to be on their wavelength, so they certainly would wait to see if he changes the court's direction before considering any action, such as restricting its jurisdiction.

Burger Initiation

Under this assumption it would be fall at the earliest before any anticourt moves could be expected in Congress since the court recesses soon and any decisions under Burger won't come down until it resumes in autumn.

It was ironical that the 7-1 decision Monday on Powell overruled a federal Court of Appeals opinion written by Burger that federal courts had no jurisdiction in the matter.

Another reason working against quick congressional reaction results from the court vacancy caused by Abe Fortas' resignation under fire last month.

Many in Congress hope the nominee, as yet unnamed, will erase the thin liberal margin that has often carried the day in controversial Warren Court decisions, particularly in criminal cases.

Little Need

If their hope is fulfilled there would be little need, the conservatives feel, for any legislation to restrict the court.

Congress could, under the Constitution, restrict the Supreme Court's jurisdiction over appeals. However, it could not touch those instances of the court's original jurisdiction specifically outlined in the Constitution, such as cases involving ambassadors and disputes between the states.

Although the Powell decision was far from thin, some congressional reaction was sharp.

House Republican Leader Gerald Ford said he was "shocked" and called the ruling an "unfortunate transgression" of the separation of powers between the legislative and judicial branches.

"Ignore Decision"

A leading Democrat suggested the decision be ignored.

Rep. William M. Colmer, D-Miss., chairman of the House Rules Committee, suggested Congress take the attitude of President Andrew Jackson, who once remarked that Chief Justice John Marshall "has made his decision, now let him enforce it."

Scene of Bloody Fight

Red Troops Return To 'Hamburger Hill'

CAMP EAGLE, Vietnam (AP) — North Vietnamese troops—possibly as many as 1,000 of them—have returned to Dong Ap Bia, the 3,000-foot mountain where U.S. paratroopers fought a bloody battle, earning for it the nickname "Hamburger Hill," that sparked congressional criticism, intelligence sources said today.

Maj. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., commander of the 101st Airborne Division, said he is prepared to send troops up the mountain again "should the situation warrant it."

Wright said in an interview there are no present plans for another ground assault, but added Hill 937—the military designation for Ap Bia—"is no different from any other piece of terrain in our area of operations."

If it becomes necessary to attack again, he said, "I am prepared to commit everything that it takes, up to the entire division, to do the job."

Anchor Spot

Wright speculated the North Vietnamese may have returned to hold the hill as an anchor for a perimeter guarding nearby supply caches in the A Shau Valley or as a radio communications base.

U.S. aircraft flying near the jungled slopes of Ap Bia have drawn ground fire in recent days and American forces have retaliated with artillery and aerial bombardment.

Wright took over command of the 101st at the end of May. Earlier that month, American paratroopers fought a 10-day battle with entrenched North Vietnamese troops on the mountain, captured it, then a few days later withdrew. More than 50 Americans and 600 North Vietnamese troops were killed.

"Senseless, Irresponsible"

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., charged it was "senseless and irresponsible" for the Americans to spend so many lives capturing "hills and positions that have no relation to ending the conflict."

Wright's predecessor, Maj. Gen. Melvin L. Zais, defended his decision by saying his mission was to attack and destroy the enemy wherever he was located and that's what he did.

Wright said the division's mission in the A Shau Valley and the mountains along the Laotian border remains the destruction of enemy forces.

Rumanians Become Bolder in Criticism

Deepening Discontent Reflects Reaction To Ceausescu's Authoritarian Policies

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK
BUCHAREST — President Nicolae Ceausescu, who wields nearly absolute power in Rumania as Communist party boss, was unpleasantly surprised on a recent early morning visit to Bucharest's markets when housewives queuing up grumbled candidly about the scarcity and poor quality of food. The incident reflects both a deepening discontent and a new boldness in airing a little of that discontent which now has appeared below the surface of Ceausescu's authoritarian state. Although Rumania's tight controls were tightened yet another notch after the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia, there are embryonic signs of dissent — s.p.o.n.t.a.n.e.o.u.s.l.y among the masses and more consciously among creative artists. Like the grumbling Ceausescu encountered at the market, these signs go unreported in the tame Rumanian press.

Evans

The food shortage is itself partially created by a primitive form of dissent: refusal by peasants to plant on their private plots for sale to the cities in protest against low prices. A bolder work stoppage occurred at Cluj (Rumania's second largest city) in Transylvania recently with a textile plant sitdown strike which was quickly suppressed by arrest.

Students' Daring

Carried away by Christmas caroling last December, students at Bucharest University poured into the streets to demand celebration of Christmas — tame by Berkeley's standards but pretty daring in Rumania. Many of Rumania's few tourists going abroad have not been coming home, climaxed by the defection in Istanbul of an entire excursion group (including the bus driver, who parked the empty bus in front of the Rumanian embassy).

Simultaneously, creative artists emboldened by relatively little censorship the past two years are surprisingly candid in talking politics. An artist just returned from a trip to Moscow told us in a loud voice in a crowded cafe: "I saw in Russia the origin of all our troubles here." Significantly, the play and novel winning this year's Writers Union national awards have themes implicitly critical of Communism.

To some seasoned Rumania-watchers, all this adds up to about zero. Indeed, the overwhelming majority of Rumanians remain as intimidated as ever by the ubiquitous security policeman. Although Ceausescu has ended the dreaded nighttime knock on the door, an imprudent remark can still stunt a career.

No Loosening

Nor is there any loosening of Stalinist centralism through which the party apparatus controls everything from Bucharest. The government dogmatically sticks to a centrally-commanded economy overemphasizing heavy industry. That means Rumania, one of Europe's richest agricultural nations, today cannot produce beef for Bucharest's deluxe hotels and produces little if any food for ordinary citizens' tables.

Moreover, the regime is selling the public on its notion that internal liberalization tacked on Ceausescu's courageously independent foreign policy would insure Soviet intervention. A student at the University of Cluj, bitterly complaining to us about prohibitions of travel to the West, added: "I guess they know what they're doing. They don't want us to become another Czechoslovakia."

Nevertheless, Ceausescu is no Stalin. Rather, his independent foreign policy unintentionally has given him mass popularity unusual for Eastern European Communist leaders. Now he wants to keep that popularity, his visit to the markets being one of many humanizing attempts.

Once off in quest of popular support, a ruler may find it difficult to meet out the iron measures needed to stifle dissent. Thus, Bucharest students arrested after the Christmas demonstration are back in their classes. The adult editors of Amphitheatre, the magazine accused of stirring up the students, were merely transferred to non-sensitive jobs as sports writers.

Ceausescu's technique with creative writers is instructive. Instead of badgering them, he seeks contented but docile writers by granting not only wider writing freedom but special privileges denied ordinary Rumanians — such as a blank check to wander around Western Europe while almost every other Rumanian can't get a passport. Some writers have swallowed the bait, criticizing Czechoslovak writers for getting into politics and losing themselves in surrealism or Heidegger's philosophy.

Political Purposes

But many other writers are utilizing the new freedom for political purposes. An example is Ion Baiescu's play, "Forgiveness," an indirect attack on the authoritarian state, which is still running despite attacks on it by Scinteia, the party newspaper. Another dramatic criticism of statism designed to reach a much wider audience is "The Reconstitution," a motion picture being withheld from distribution by the Cultural Ministry but likely to be released eventually.

Whereas Ceausescu welcomed the 1968 reform movement in Czechoslovakia as merely another example of autonomous national Communism, Rumania's liberal writers saw in it the dream of Democratic socialism — a view shared to a lesser extent by students here. Though their numbers are tiny, these liberals — by catalyzing mass dissatisfaction with Rumanian life — could help generate a glacially slow liberalization over the years.

That definitely won't make Rumania another Czechoslovakia or Yugoslavia. But it is much more than Nicolae Ceausescu bargained for when he started down that fateful road of an independent foreign policy.

To Your Good Health Orange Juice Retains Most of Its Vitamin C

BY GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: You discussed the matter of orange juice (fresh or frozen) losing its vitamin content after a day or so. I use frozen juice which I keep four or five days in a tightly sealed jar in the refrigerator. I can't use it up any faster. Does that mean its valueless as a source of vitamin C? — L.G.

Dr. Thosteson

— that the vitamin C declines. But don't think your orange juice is "valueless." (Besides, it contains other nutrients.) Don't mix or prepare it in needlessly large amounts. Don't prepare it too long in advance of using.

That way you'll get maximum vitamin C. But don't be disturbed if it takes you a few days to use up a batch.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could eating prunes daily be harmful? I've discovered that if I eat three to six prunes in mid-evening my constipation problem is practically non-existent and my hemorrhoids are so much better. Also please send me your booklet, "The Real Cure for Hemorrhoids," for which I enclose 35 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope. — Mrs. J.G.

The prunes won't harm you; they are a nutritive fruit besides being a non-irritating but effective laxative. I often recommend prunes or prune juice. Booklet has been sent — but you've already discovered for yourself one of the most effective of all methods of preventing hemorrhoids from recurring or getting worse.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How can I know if I have gonorrhea? I've heard it is hard to detect in women. I have reason to believe I may have it, but do not want to consult my doctor. What are the possible results if not treated? — T.Y.

If you think you have it but "don't want to consult the doctor," there isn't a thing I can do for you. Consequences of not having it treated? Chronic infection; sterility; prospect of infecting others in your family — including your children; disease of bladder and kidneys; arthritis; heart disease; even blood poisoning.

There are an estimated 12,000 blind children in the U.S. because of gonorrhea — young children can get the germ from toys, towels, etc., although adults rarely contract it other than by sexual contact.

I have no sympathy for people who think they have a venereal disease and won't go to the doctor. They are a danger to themselves, their families, and their friends.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 70 and have had two doctors, one a specialist, tell me nothing can be done to relieve flatulence (gas) caused by dairy products. What do you say about this? — R.S.G.

If the gas is proved to be a result of milk products, then something can be done. For some people, not many but some, are allergic to milk. What can you do? Avoid milk. It's as simple as that. Most such patients can tolerate a little, and if they stay below that level, they aren't bothered. (Copyright, 1969)

Letter to Jingo From Attic Theatre Worker

Fans Can Learn All About Cast in 'Dear Ruth' Opening Season Saturday

BY JINGO
Jingo received a special letter this morning from a "backstage worker" for Attic Theater. Jingo's educated guess is that the tag "backstage worker" is correct, all right, but the writer also is working for the publicity committee.

It's not uncommon — actually it's the custom rather than the exception — that exuberant and devoted Attic members do multiple duty willingly. Community theater work is like that.

Jingo enjoys Attic productions along with hundreds of other Fox Cities theater fans (stage-struck is the word for many of us), so the following letter is brimful of interesting information for those with our thespian interest.

Dear Jingo, The stage isn't everybody's thing, I know, but it does seem that more and more people are succumbing to the magnetic pull of community theater. All kinds of people.

Earlier this century, "show people" weren't considered exactly normal. Almost no one stage. The comedy "Years Ago" wanted offspring to head for the "Attic," Attic Theatre's first play this summer (opening Saturday) is about that.

True Story It's a true story, written by actress Ruth Gordon about herself. She had a compulsion to act. Her father wanted her to be a physical culture instructor. It created problems!

But that was in 1913. Now, not only offspring but parents and grandparents are finding acting and its related arts a very good thing to be doing during leisure hours.

The cast of "Years Ago" knows some reasons why. Ruth Herself Ricky VanderVelden, who plays Ruth, bubbles over when you talk about summer theater. "These are summer people to me — generating warmth like a crazy sun. Even make-up can't hide their glow and friendliness. It's beautiful here!"

Ricky has been teaching in the Head Start program at Crivitz, Wis., and will go back to WSU-Oshkosh next fall to finish up her degree in elementary education. Her minor is speech and theater, and she'll use it in her teaching of small fry.

Ricky began with Attic in 1944 as one of the delightfully inept (as per script!) singers and dancers, billed as "The Hollywood Blondes", in the musical "Gypsy". She played in Attic's next three musicals, "Bye Bye Birdie", "Annie Get Your Gun", and "Guys and Dolls", and in musicals at Kaukauna High School.

Jingo

Engineer Jim Parker Chemical engineer Jim Parker, who plays Ruth's father, explains his interest in Attic thus: "Fun!"

Without much coaxing, he elaborated: "My wife talked me into it! Sue headed a make-up crew two summers ago. She met a lot of kindred spirits backstage. She figured if other ordinary citizens could act and have fun at it, we should try it. So we went to tryouts last year."

As a result, Sue won the role of Brenda in "Pajama Game," and Jim the parson's role in "Arsenic and Old Lace." This season Sue will play Mrs. Upson in "Mame." Even the Parker children, 6 and 8, get involved — last year they had the lyrics of "Pajama Game" learned before Sue did, and they were her severest critics as she practiced around the house.

Addicted or Type Cast Margaret Heyn (Mrs. Willis Heyn, of Neenah) continues her series of "mom" roles as the mother of Ruth in this first play. She had maternal roles in "Bye Bye Birdie," "You Can't Take It With You," "The Skin of our Teeth" and was one of the sweet old lady murderers of grandmothers mien on "Arsenic and Old Lace." However, when she acted for Riverside Players' "Dairy of Anne Frank," she had a non-mom role.

Mrs. President in Role Marilyn Auer plays the gym teacher in whose footsteps Papa wants Ruth to follow. In her own life, Marilyn has loved the footlights since her college days at Northwestern University, after which she earned a master's degree at The University of Wisconsin at Madison in design and the technical aspects of theatre.

Marilyn is current president of Attic's Board of Governors, and has been a vital part of Attic's life since 1964. She has been actress, costume and set designer, director of reading groups and acting workshops, and worked on assorted crews backstage. Her latest acting role was in "Caesar and Cleopatra."

It's a family affair for the Auers, Marilyn's husband and her father are both Attic actors, her mother is Attic historian, and two-year old Charlie no doubt will join them as soon as there's a tiny tot!

Acting Debuts For Maureen McDonough and Mary Ann Esler, who play Ruth's best friends, this will be an Attic acting debut, but both have been active in drama in school-Maureen at Appleton High-West and Mary Ann at Kaukauna High.

Maureen feels that playing a 1913 teen-ager isn't hard because "things change more than people." That seems to explain why Maureen, new to Attic last summer, slipped so smoothly into new friendships as she worked on props, make-up, and in the junior workshop.

John R. Ernst John Ernst, a UW-Fox Valley student, plays a Harvard student in his role as Ruth's boy friend. Last year he was a policeman in "Arsenic."

That man driving your bus has something to grin about. One of his stocks is up.

If you think stock investments are for people who are chaffieured about in Rolls-Royce cars instead of people who drive buses, you're mistaken. The New York Stock Exchange says that over 80% of the stock owners in America are non-professional people. And the average income of a new shareholder is about $8,800 a year. But the biggest surprise is that millions of people earn more, save thousands and don't own a dime in stocks. If you have some surplus savings but don't own stock, we urge you to learn about stocks. For starters, send for a primer called Understanding the New York Stock Exchange. After saving so much, you owe yourself a look around.
